Faisal Assassination Spurs Fears of New Oil Crisis

Times News Services

King Faisal of Saudi Arabia, the most moderate of Arab leaders and one of the world's most powerful monarchs, was assassinated today by a demented nephew in the midst of a Moslem religious ceremony in Riyadh.

His death threatened the Middle East and the world with a new crisis that could have unforseen effects on future oil prices.

Faisal was succeeded to the throne by his younger brother, Crown Prince Khalid, 62, who had served as first deputy prime minister.

The slaying had instant world-wide repercussions. Oil prices on the London stock market plunged as much as 24 cents, representing fears that the delicate state of Arab relations with the west could be impaired.

In New York, the jittery stock market dropped sharply at today's opening but then began to recover.

Analysts on Wall Street said Faisal's death added to the anxiety of investors over the failure of U.S. Secretary-of-State Henry Kissinger's Middle East peace mission, a major factor in sending prices downward Monday.

Although instrumental in the 1973 Arab oil embargo, Faisal was considered by U.S. businessmen to be pro-American and an admirer of the free enterprise system.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries cancelled today's Vienna meeting of experts on oil prices because of the death.

Some oil sources said his assassination could plunge OPEC into a severe crisis.

The experts were to discuss how to sever the traditional oil-dollar link to preserve their oil revenues from the decline in the value of U.S. dollar.

France expressed concern that the murder may dangerously increase tensions in the Middle East. The over-riding fear in the West is that the staunchly anti-Russian Faisal could be succeeded by a left-leaning regime.

Israel, faced with a breakdown of the Kissinger negotiations with Egypt, also reacted swiftly. An official source called the murder a reminder of the instability of Arab regimes and warned that if a leftist regime took over in Saudi Arabia there could be dangerous shifts in the balance of power in the Middle East.

A radio announcement in Riyadh said the nephew, Faisal bin Musaed shot the 69-year-old king several times after approaching him to offer salutations on the occasion of the Prophet Mohammed's birthday, being celebrated today throughout the Moslem world.

There was no immediate word on the fate of the nephew.

"When he got near the king, he fired several shots at His Majesty," the announcement said. The radio called the assassination "an individual one." It said the prince was "mentally unsound, had acted on this own and was not driven by anyone."

★ Peace Force Pullout?

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Defence Minister James Richardson told the Commons Monday that Canada's peace keeping forces in the Middle East would have to evacuate and leave the area of hostilities if a shooting war breaks out there.

He explained that they have sidearms and are not equipped to defend themselves against an invading army.

The question was raised in the house because of the dangerous situation developing between Israeli and the Arab nations with the breakdown of U.S. Henry Kissinger's failure to secure an agreement for peace between Israel and Egypt.

Egypt has called on the Arab world to mobilize against Israel. Israel has vowed to stand alone against threats and pressures.

In Cairo, Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmi asked the 20-nation Arab League Monday night to strangle Israel economically and politically.

He blamed Israel for the collapse of Kissinger's recent peace mission and accused the Jewish state of "playing with words" instead of negotiating.

B.C. Professionals Hinting at Strike

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

The word "strike" is now being whispered in hushed tones among the professional employees in the provincial government.

It's an unusual word for professionals to use and most of the talk is still aimed at avoiding strike action or any other kind of on-the-job confrontation. Nevertheless the Times has learned that militant feelings have been aroused among the 1,100 engineers, dentists and other professionals who form the B.C. Government Professional Employees' Association. (BCGPEA)

And in meetings around the province last week, the professionals made it clear to the BCGPEA executive they are willing to adopt a much harder line — assume an adversary role — to fight the government.

Negotiations with the government for the BCGPEA's first master contract have bogged down after eight months of talks and the professional civil servants are frustrated, disillusioned and more than a little angry.

They charge the government has not bargained in good faith and is now attempting to destroy the union.

The situation is rife with ironies and contradictions.

The NDP, with an ideological commitment to collective bargaining for civil servants, imposed unionization on a hesitant group of professionals who had had little or no previous association with unions.

The professionals dutifully if reluctantly formed their association last year but stressed that their aim was to establish a harmonious, non-adversary relationship with the government. They decided they should forego the right to strike and pledge their first loyalty to their employer and their professional code rather than to their own association.

But now the BCGPEA leaders believe the tables have turned.

It's the government which no longer wants the professionals to exist as a union and the professionals who are anxious to retain their rights as an association.

There are many steps the association can take to exert pressure on the government, according to the BCGPEA executive, and full strike action is at the bottom of a list of some 20 options.

Many associations members are still firmly opposed to any strike action by professionals but executive spokesmen indicated a "surprising measure of militancy" was evident at the recent meetings.

Some members of the BCGPEA blame the failure of negotiations on the government's inability to conceive of harmonious, non-adversary labor relations. With deep roots in the trade union movement, they say, the NDP is not willing to accept the professional approach of the BCGPEA.

Other association members charge that certain deputy ministers have persuaded the government that unionization of professional-management people will threaten the established lines of authority

U.S. Planning Viet Airlift

Times News Services

The U.S., using contracted commercial airliners, Thursday will begin an airlift of 10,000 refugees a day from Da Nang, Western diplomats said today.

Da Nang, South Vietnam's second-largest city about 350 miles north of Saigon, has become vulnerable to attack since the North Vietnamese over-ran two provincial capitals to the south and the Saigon government abandoned Hue 50 miles to the north.

Western diplomats said the retreating troops boarded boats under fire at the nearby port of Tan My for the trip down the coast of the South China Sea to Da Nang.

The pullout from Hue, the third largest city and spiritual centre of South Vietnam, left the Communists in control of 11 of the country's 44 provinces, 50 per cent of its 66,000 square miles.

There was no indication how long it would take for the 20,000 retreating troops to leave Hue, a walled city of stately streets, Buddhist shrines and ancient artifacts.

More than 1,000 U.S. marines were killed or wounded during the 1968 Tet offensive in 26 days of fierce fighting for Hue, 400 miles north of Saigon.

In Saigon, unsubstantiated rumors of possible coup attempts by enraged generals and colonels were numerous, and President Nguyen Van Thieu officially replaced the military governor of the capital with a general thought to be more loyal to him.

"The mood is very ugly," said a highly-placed Vietnamese military source. "Colonels are saying that Thieu should be assassinated and the generals are furious. It's like playing with fire around spilled gasoline. One of the matches is going to ignite it."

Thieu's view of the Hue battle was said to be that if defence of the city proves too costly, it is expendable, sources say.

Police Seize Diamonds

REGINA (CP) — A large number of diamonds valued between $500,000 and $1 million were seized during a search of 24 city homes in part of a country-wide raid, police said Monday.

An RCMP spokesman said it was believed an international diamond smuggling ring based in Regina may have been uncovered in the raid which followed an investigation conducted during the last few months.

The spokesman said the exact value of the gems will not be known until they can be examined by a gemologist.

The incident began about 9 a.m. when RCMP approached a home in a Regina suburb to serve a warrant under the Customs Act. They were met with a shot fired from within the building.

City police were called to aid the RCMP and entry to the building was gained after Morris Schumiatcher, a city lawyer, talked a man, whose name was not released, into surrendering.

There were no injuries. The RCMP spokesman said similar searches were conducted in other Canadian and U.S. centres.

Charges are pending and until they are laid later this week in provincial court, the names of individuals involved will not be released, he added.

BEAVER SYMBOL OFFICIAL

The small, broad-tailed rodent was recognized in a private bill introduced in the Commons by Sean O'Sullivan (PC — Hamilton Wentworth).

The bill, which received support of all parties in the Commons and the Senate, was given royal assent in the Senate Monday night.

Court Grants Picketing Curb

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton today granted a wider injunction than the Greater Victoria School District sought to restrain picketing by Local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

After a three-hour hearing in B.C. Supreme Court chambers this morning the judge granted an injunction that:

—There shall be no interference with delivery of fuel oil to any and all schools;

—A maximum of two pickets only at any site of operation — the school board office and the schools;

—No picketing at schools between 8 and 10 a.m.;

—No picketing at schools between 3 and 4 p.m.;

Wootten said the injunction will continue until trial.

He said matters of law of "grave importance" have been raised as to whether sections of the Public Schools Act should override sections of the Labor Code and it is "most desirable that a trial of this matter be heard."

The school board had sought an injunction limiting pickets to three at each school entrance.

Union lawyer Ian Stewart said an appeal will be launched in the B.C. Court of Appeal.

Stewart argued there was no evidence of immediate danger to life and health.

He said the school board has "already created a regime of disruption in the school system" by cutting classes to between one and three hours a day.

"I don't see how pickets could interfere with deliveries when the pickets are not there much of the day," he said.

To grant an injunction now, he said, would effectively remove the "bargaining weapon," the union has.

Wootton objected to the use of the word weapon saying "men should get on together. There are too many weapons in the world today."

Stewart said only seven schools were affected by picketing, that the students were affected equally by the school board and the union, and

READERS' BONUS IN FOOD SECTION

Food and nutrition loom large in the minds of all homemakers these days, so it's no wonder that the Food and Nutrition section in the Victoria Times every Wednesday has been so popular with readers.

Now Victoria Times readers are getting a bonus. The Food and Nutrition section has been expanded and will appear both Wednesdays and Thursdays.

And a new personality has been added to the list of top-notch writers who appear in the section regularly.

He is "Tiny" Bennett, well-known Canadian professional outdoors writer who has also been cooking for 40 years — and writing about cooking for 18 years.

"Tiny" — he's six-foot-six — believes firmly that the role of a writer on food and cooking is to bring to readers quality home cooking based upon reasonable costs, and he has created a new look in cooking columns where costs to the family are carefully presented for all the meals covered.

Tiny Bennett — and the Food and Nutrition Sections — more good reasons to read the Victoria Times.

12th Seiner Down

The 12th fish boat to be lost or capsized since the herring season started eight days ago was spotted overturned in Hecate Strait this morning.

The 56-foot aluminium seiner was spotted 20 miles northeast of Cumshewa Inlet, which is south of Sandspit on Moresby Island.

It cannot be confirmed but it is believed the seiner carried a five-man crew.

Two Trans Pacific airline planes were despatched to the scene from Sandspit. Also searching the area were three aircraft from CFB Comox.

The boat was later identified as the Bravado, belonging to Nelson Bros. of Prince Rupert.

Two fisheries vessels are now combing the area as well as six vessels belonging to B.C. Packers. The coast guard cutter Rider was despatched to the scene from Bella Bella.

57% FOR PACT

OTTAWA (CP) — With about 50 per cent of the vote in, federal blue collar workers have been voting by a 57-per-cent margin in favor of a tentative contract settlement, a Public Service Alliance spokesman said today.

But the result so far on contract proposals that would provide pay raises of 29.25 per cent over 26 months is worrying alliance leaders who fear the agreement could be rejected by workers belonging to the 18,600-member group. Average hourly wage for the workers now is $4.42.

Early returns from some of the more vocal locals had indicated rejection of the settlement but as results from more moderate came in, the situation changed.

NEWS BRIEFS

Leftist Cabinet

LISBON (UPI) — Premier Vasco Goncalves today announced the creation of a new revolutionary cabinet packed with Communists and their allies in key ministerial posts. Socialist leader Mario Soares was ousted as foreign minister, despite his objections, but remained in the government without portfolio.

B.C. Oil Imports

OTTAWA (CP) — The B.C. Energy Commission estimates the province will have to import about 280,000 barrels of oil a day — about 90 per cent of its needs — by 1994.

The commission notes in a brief to the National Energy Board released Monday that B.C. oil fields currently meet only about 25 per cent of the province's demands. Five years ago they supplied 50 per cent.

U.S. Bank Fails

HOUSTON (AP) — The Franklin Bank was closed Monday because of "adverse economic conditions" and losses incurred by its loans. The failure was the fifth in the U.S. in the last two years. The bank, which opened in 1965, had deposits of slightly more than $18 million last Dec. 31, officials said.

Dockers Ordered Back to Work

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Parliament Monday night ordered B.C.'s 4,000 striking longshoremen to return to work today.

The Commons and Senate gave quick passage to legislation introduced Monday afternoon by Labor Minister John Munro, forcing the men to return to their jobs under the terms of their old contract which expired Dec. 31.

The West Coast Port Operations Act, 1975, as it is called, authorizes the binding arbitration of the dispute which has kept west coast docks idle since March 1.

Don Garcia, a spokesman for the International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union in Vancouver, said today he presumes the longshoremen will be back on the job later today.

Garcia said he presumes — and he emphasized presumes — the men will report for work on the docks at 5 p.m. today under the former collective agreement.

Meanwhile, members of the longshoremen's union are meeting to consider the back-to-work legislation.

Alex Cregan, president of the British Columbia Maritime Employers Association, said it will be Wednesday at the earliest before operations can resume.

Even if the longshoremen return it will take 24 hours to gear up for a resumption of operations on the waterfront.

He also said the employers have not yet received official notice from Ottawa that the legislation has been passed.

Under the terms of the legislation, the old contract between the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union and the B.C. Maritime Employers' Association is extended to Dec. 31, 1976, or until a new contract is worked out by arbitration, whichever is earlier.

The legislation also orders ship and dock foremen who walked off the job Sunday, to return to work while their first contract is being settled the same way.

The Commons rejected an attempt by New Democratic Party MPs to give the longshoremen the first half of the wage settlement agreed to by negotiators but rejected by the union membership Saturday.

That settlement, worked out by the two parties with the help of Assistant Deputy Labor Minister William Kelly, would have given the men a raise of $1.95 an hour — $1.15 in 1976 and 80 cents in 1976.

Gov't Office Space Wasted—Bennett

Office space leased by the government in Prince George last August has remained vacant for more than seven months, Opposition leader Bill Bennett charged Monday.

The 4,900 square feet of space is costing the province $32,851 a year, said Bennett, but the government still has not moved in and has not taken steps to renovate the office space.

The Socred leader raised the issue in the legislature and Public Works Minister Bill Hartley said he would check into it.

The principle at stake is what policy the government follows to anticipate its space needs, and he asked Hartley to explain the policy.

Hartley said space is not acquired until it is absolutely necessary but after space is leased the department has to design the facilities to meet specific needs of each department.

But Levi Johnson, manager of the Oxford Building in Prince George, said later in an interview the government signed a lease for the third floor of the building Aug. 1, 1974, and has not presented any plans for renovating the space.

The building is new with just the barest finishing and each tenant has to design the interior to his liking.

He confirmed the cost of renting the space is $6.50 a square foot per year and said he has heard of no explanation why the government has not moved in.

The government is already occupying space on the fifth floor of the building, but the third floor space was to be used for housing and parks branch space.

In answering the question in the legislature, Hartley said he would advise the house of government policy on rental accommodation but he also called on Bennett to table his information on the Prince George situation.

MAIL OFFER 'RISKY'

A mail order offer by an Ontario firm on electronic mini calculators at cut rate prices may not be such a good deal after all, Bill Tindall, manager of the Victoria Better Business Bureau, has warned.

The offer, contained in a circular mailed to residents in Victoria from Eastern Freight Distributors of Downsview, announces a liquidation sale of 1,411 calculators at $38.50 each, slashed from the $99.50 list price.

The notice says the calculators have been held in bonded warehouse while creditors claims are settled.

Tindall said the company gives a one-year free replacement guarantee if the calculator malfunctions but added the guarantee might be worthless.

"Generally, any guarantee is a manufacturer's one and yet in as much as it is a liquidation sale that would imply the manufacturer has gone out of business."

He said the company is not registered with the Business Registry office in Toronto and that 16 complaints about the company in Ontario have gone unanswered.

Since the circular showed up here there have been several inquiries to the BBB, Tindall said:

"It's a pretty hairy type of offer. Of course it is an attractive price but in view of the complaints we feel it might be fairly risky proposition."

Saanich Seeking Vandalism Report

Trustees are concerned that district maintenance workers are having to spend too much time and material repairing damage done to schools by vandals.

The monthly reports will include information on whether the vandalism seems to occur most often at certain times or in certain parts of the school district.

Most serious vandalism in the past year in the district was the fire set in the library of North Saanich middle school last May 25 by two teenagers, which did $150,000 damage.

In other business the board:

—Approved sketch plans for an addition to Clarmont senior secondary school, including a new foods room and a metal shop, and ordered working drawings prepared.

—Received a notice of the retirement of district accountant Muriel Knott, who will end her 18-year-career with the school district Aug. 31.

—Set a tentative date of April 9 for a meeting with Brentwood elementary school parents, who are concerned that proposed reorganization of schools in the southern half of the district may result in some Brentwood children having to attend other schools.

CUPE Bargaining to Resume

since the last mass picketing (March 18) there has been no further mass picketing and it is not the intention to carry out any more.

"Their hope is for an early settlement," he said. "We need a spirit of reconciliation here."

Bargaining will resume at 10 a.m. Wednesday as the first action in two weeks to attempt to settle the dispute.

Sessions at the Empress Hotel, arranged by provincial mediator Clark Gilmour, are the only settlement path in view of civic employers' refusal to accept a voluntary industrial inquiry and Labor Minister Bill King's reluctance to intervene.

King said Monday he will not use his authority to impose third party intervention in the dispute, which involves some 1,800 school and municipal employees belonging to Canadian Union of Public Employees.

A source close to regional employers said there are no new proposals to put forward at Wednesday's meeting but stand-in negotiator George Wilkinson has been instructed by the employers to explore whatever avenues he can to get back to meaningful negotiations.

CUPE's area bargaining committee turned down the last offer made by the employer group, which was to raise wages by about 24 per cent over two years, with a cost of living adjustment next year.

The only abnormal picket action today was by CUPE Local 388. City of Victoria inside workers, who Monday began picketing a James Bay construction site, the $5 million Bay Village project being built by Farmer Construction Ltd., alleging that strike breaking inspectors are being used.

The firm denies the charge and is seeking a Labor Relations Board order to remove pickets which have brought the undertaking to a halt.

King said in the legislature Monday he has power to impose an industrial commission to settle the strike-lockout, but pointed out that unless both sides co-operate a commission would be meaningless.

U.S. AIRLIFT

military situation and the need for assistance in South Vietnam, the chief White House spokesman announced today.

Weyand once was U.S. military commander in South Vietnam.

The Pentagon meanwhile announced a 300-man marine helicopter squadron is preparing to head for the Far East, possibly to assist in evacuation of Americans from Cambodia or Vietnam.

The squadron has been alerted to go on the Hancock which will leave Pearl Harbor "some time this week for a possible move to Westpac (the Western Pacific) ... we are not able to tell you exactly where they are going and I would not make any assumptions," a Pentagon spokesman said.

The helicopter carrier Okinawa and accompanying ships with about 1,500 marines and 30 helicopters have been in the Gulf of Thailand off Cambodia for the past few weeks in case they are needed to evacuate Americans from Phnom Penh.

Two thousand men of the South Vietnamese 1st Infantry Division arrived by boat in Da Nang today where they were rumored to be forming a new defence line.

Fear gripped the isolated city where U.S. combat troops first entered the Vietnam War in March, 1965. The city was tense and jammed, its population of 500,000 more than doubled by refugees.

Panicky civilians swamped the Air Vietnam terminal, trying to get out of the city. Some soldiers deserted and joined their families on overloaded boats for Saigon.

Meanwhile in Cambodia, 20 Khmer Rouge rockets hit Phnom Penh airport Monday night and today, but there was no interruption in the U.S. airlift of rice, ammunition and petroleum products to the Cambodian capital.

The rockets landed just outside the U.S. embassy forcing Ambassador John Gunther Dean to leave his office and take over in a ground floor shelter.

The airlift resumed shortly before noon Monday after a two-day suspension ordered when two of the planes were damaged by shelling. U.S. officials said there were 23 flights on Monday, instead of the usual 40 to 45.

$3,000 Damage In Fire

An estimated $3,000 damage was done when fire broke out in the rear of a single-storey home at 1110 MacKenzie over the noon hour Wednesday.

Occupants Mrs. Vera Watkiss and her son were away at the time.

Turks Fire on Jet

ANKARA (UPI) — Turkish anti-aircraft' gunners today fired on a Greek air force jet that violated Turkish airspace in the first shooting incident since last summer's Cyprus war, a foreign office spokesman said.

Faisal

Arab world interrupted their normal programs to announce Faisal's death. All immediately switched to readings of the Koran.

Riyadh radio said that funeral services for the slain monarch would be held immediately after prayers tonight at the Riyadh grand mosque.

In Washington, officials said the assassination comes as a severe blow to United States policy in the Middle East.

Kissinger had counted on Faisal to maintain an element of stability in the Middle East, since he represented one of the more politically conservative and anti-Communist regimes in the region.

While a strong friend of the U.S., Faisal also was a bitter opponent of what he considered Washington's pro-Israeli stance and had spearheaded the oil embargo by the Organization of petroleum Exporting Countries against Israel's friends during the Arab-Israeli war of October, 1973.

Levi Defends Youth

Human Resources Minister Norman Levi Monday criticized the attitude of adults toward youngsters when he addressed the Particip-Action committee of the Victoria-Oak Bay NDP at a meeting in Fairfield United Church.

He said adults are releasing more venom against youngsters these days than they are against even murderers and drug traffickers.

"In all my career — and I'm 48 and travelled to many places — I have never heard such vitriolic rhetoric as I have heard in this province, with the talk of vigilante groups and who knows what, just to deal with a bunch of kids," he told the group of about 100.

Levi pointed out that contrary to popular conception, a study in Surrey showed only 15 per cent of children in trouble with the law came from welfare families. The rest came from working or middle-class homes.

"These kids belong to everybody in the community," he said.

Levi said programs and special services to families are being offered by the government. The government is looking for people who could work under supervision on short-term contracts to help families with problems.

Levi said there are 9,000 children in care, down from the 11,200 when the NDP took office.

Residential and treatment programs for children will cost $16 million.

The government will make a detailed statement in the legislature on the number of places available for children needing treatment, he said.

UNION FIRES OWN STRIKING WORKERS

OTTAWT (CP) — The Letter Carriers Union of Canada fired its office staff Monday after they refused to return to work following a disagreement with management about the promotion of a casual employee to a permanent position.

Andree Belanger, shop steward of Local 225, Office and Professional Employees International Union, representing the eight women, said letters of dismissal were issued them while they picketed the downtown Ottawa office.

The women walked off the job March 14 after Alec Edey, LOUC secretary-treasurer, did not meet with them concerning the unadvertised position won by the casual employee.

$300M Salmon Plan

VANCOUVER (CP) — Federal Fisheries Minister Romeo Leblanc announced Monday a government plan to double British Columbia's salmon production value to $400 million by 1990.

The minister said in a statement that the plan could cost as much as $300 million during the next 15 years and would be implemented in co-operation with the provincial government.

The plan involves use of artificial spawning channels, hatcheries and fishways to increase Pacific salmon stocks for the benefit of commercial and recreational fisheries and the feed fishery of B.C. Indians.

"We could conceivably add 25 million salmon to the B.C. commerical catch, increasing annual wholesale value of industry production to $400 million," said Leblanc.

"We could also triple the annual capacity of the sport salmon fishery to three million fishing days and have a thoroughly adequate Indian food fishery."

The minister said that planning of development projects and facilities will begin this spring and continue for two years.

He has already discussed the project with provincial Recreation Minister Jack Radford and the B.C. government "has expressed keen interest" in co-operating on the plan, he added.

Implementation of the program will begin in 1977 or earlier on approval of the detailed proposals for construction and development.

Construction of enhancement facilities will continue at the present level of $2 million a year until the program is submitted to cabinet in 1977, said the minister.

There would then be a $15 to $20 million available for the program annually after 1980, he said.

The minister said the Pacific salmon resource has declined to one-half of past levels, largely because of industrial and urban development. He said thge government expects the salmon supply to stabilize at a higher level because of the new project and this would result in reduced catching and processing costs

The end result would be a more competitive salmon industry and would make th8e product more competitive on the market.

Canada's balance of payments situation is also expected to improve as most of the increased salmon production would go for export, he added.

FRANCE ACCEPTS TERMS

NAIROBI (UPI) — France today accepted all demands from a band of gunmen who kidnapped the French ambassador to Somalia and held him prisoner for three days.

"The government has agreed to everything and I have just spoken to my husband," Mrs. Jean Gueury, said in a telephone interview. "Of course, I am now feeling full of hope."

In Paris, a spokesman at the Elysee Presidential Palace said compliance with the gunmen's demands for the release of two guerrillas in French jails, payment of a fortune in gold and a plane to take them to South Yemen was intended to save Gueury's life.

Oil Levies Split

OTTAWA (CP) — The government introduced a bill Monday to give all the provinces except B.C. and Ontario more money because of changes in oil prices and oil tax legislation.

Finance department officials refused to say how much money is involved.

The bill was introduced on behalf of Finance Minister John Turner, who was out of town, and aides said estimates of provincial payments cannot be released without his permission.

The bill would change formulas for federal payments under two tax agreements.

One was the agreement allegedly made last March when Prime Minister Trudeau and the premiers agreed to a price of $6.50 a barrel for domestic crude oil.

Provincial premiers have since disagreed with the federal version of that agreement.

The other formula relates to the major revision of tax laws in 1972. When that revision was made, the federal government guaranteed that provinces would not get less revenue out of the revised system, up to 1977, than they would have received under the old system.

The changes dealing with the revision of the tax laws in 1972 give, in effect, federal approval to a decision by the Alberta government to give tax rebates to oil companies.

One set of changes gives more money over-all to at least six of the seven provinces which receive payments under the federal equalization formula.

This formula provides that the so-called have-not provinces get payments to bring them up to the national average of per capita tax collections.

Finance department officials declined comment on how oil-producing Saskatchewan would fare under the changes since it loses money in one way and gains in another.

24 ON BLACKLIST

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — President Ford signed an executive order Monday placing 24 countries on a trade blacklist. The order gives special trade preferences to 89 developing countries and 43 dependent territories.

Blacklisted were all 13 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries as well as Cyprus, Greece, Hong Kong, Israel, Yemen, Portugal, Romania, Somalia, Spain, Turkey and Uganda.

The U.S. preferences provide up to 10 years duty-free treatment to favored countries supplying a broad range of manufactured and semi-finished products.

THE SOURCE AND THE SOLUTION

"I am the Lord, and there is none else, there is no God beside me I form the light and create darkness I make peace, and create evil . . . I have made the earth, and created man upon it: I, even my hands, have stretched out the heavens, and all their host have I commanded . . . Declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying, My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure" (Isa. 45:5, 7, 12; 46 10

The Scriptures were "written for our admonition upon whom the ends of the world are come" (1st Cor. 10:11), the day in which we now live. They reveal that when man defied God's laws they reaped corruption, trouble and sorrow. When they obeyed they reaped righteousness, peace and joy. This has been particularly true concerning the people God chose especially for Himself—the ten tribes of Ephriam-Israel (the Anglo-Saxon-Celtic nations) and the two tribes of Judah (Amos 3:1, 2; Deut. 7:6)

"This also know, that in the last days perlious times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blastphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, trucebreakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, highminded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof" (2nd Tim. 3:1-5).

We are living today under these very conditions. Why? Not having learned anything from the experiences of our forefathers we today are making the same mistake they made and we are, as a consequence, receiving the same chastisement. And what mistake was that? "Hear ye this, O house of Jacob (the twelve tribes), which are called by the name of Israel (the ten tribes), and are come forth out of the waters of Judah (the two tribes) which swear by the name of the Lord, and make mention of the God of Israel, BUT NOT IN TRUTH, NOR IN RIGHTEOUSNESS" (Isa. 48:1). "For the house of Israel and the house of Judah have dealt very treacherously against me, saith the Lord" (Jer. 5:11). As with our forefathers so with us, we claim to worship God but we make our own laws and reject His. We say, "The Lord seeth us not; the Lord hath forsaken the earth" (Ezek. 8:12).

But "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap" (Gal. 6:7). And God takes full responsibility for inflicting upon us the result of our disobedience. "I also will choose their delusions, and will bring their fears upon them; because when I called, none did answer; when I spake they did not hear; but they did evil before mine eyes, and chose that in which I delighted not" (Isa. 66:4).

"Hear, O earth: behold, I will bring evil upon these people, even the fruit of their thoughts, because they have not harkened unto my words, nor to my law, but rejected it" (Jer. 6:19).

"To whom shall I speak, and give warning, that they may hear? behold their ear is uncircumcised, and they cannot harken: behold, the word of the Lord is unto them a reproach; they have no delight in it . . . for from the least of them even unto the greatest of them every one is given to covetousness; and from the prophet even unto the priest every one dealeth falsely" (Jer. 6:10, 13)

"I smote you with blasting and with mildew and with hail in all the labours of your hands; yet ye turned not to me, saith the Lord" (Haggai 2:17).

And there is much more to come: "For then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be. And except those days should be shortened, there shall be no flesh saved: but for the elect's sake (the twelve tribes of Emphriam-Israel and Judah) those days shall be shortened" (Matt. 24: 21, 22)

When are we going to wake up, turn to God, acknowledge that all of our troubles—political, financial and social—are coming from Him because of our violation of His laws, search His word of truth, the Bible, to learn His laws, both for the nation and for the individual, and be governed by them!

When we do—"Prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it" (Malachi 3:10).

Gas and the Politicians

It's a delicate dance around the maypole in which Premier Dave Barrett, the Liberal contingent in the legislature and the federal government are engaged in the run-up to the federal-provincial energy conference next month. British Columbia's main concern at the conference will be the price of natural gas we export to the U.S. Pacific northwest.

Now it sells for $1 per thousand cubic feet, which is a 300 per cent increase on what the stuff was selling for less than two years ago. According to the premier, its real value when compared with other fuel sources is at least $2. The provincial government's energy commission has already proposed to the federal National Energy Board, which has jurisdiction over exports, that the price be immediately raised to this level.

B.C. is certain to get an increase. The only question is how much? And how far is Ottawa willing to go in antagonizing the United States? Especially a region like the northwest which boasts numerous politicians with plenty of clout to retaliate — Washington has two senior U.S. senators, Oregon the chairman of the key ways and means committee in the U.S. House of Representatives.

Barrett has right on his side — of course our gas was ridiculously undervalued for some time, and B.C. is locked into too-long export contracts which will run to 1989, years after B.C. gas reserves have hit their peak.

He also has a small piece of ammunition in the NEB's recent approval of the export of a small amount of Alberta natural gas to the U.S. northwest at prices averaging $1.61 a thousand cubic feet, hitting a maximum of $1.91. Now Barrett doesn't have to refer to unregulated gas prices in far-away Louisiana and Texas as the target he's shooting at.

But there are a few ifs and buts about the high-priced deal. It's only to run for 19 months and covers export of just 55 million cubic feet a day, less than one-sixteenth of the 809 million cubic feet B.C. is contracted to deliver. In fact, the high price is being paid only out of dire necessity — the U.S. buyer needs it to help make up for shortfalls in the gas B.C. delivers, caused by production troubles in the north.

So it seems to be quite a special case.

The premier's problem is that he will have to make a very strong case for B.C. getting the same price for all of its gas too, although the circumstances are rather different. In fact, he seems to have budgetted for a price of at least $1.50 when he estimated gas revenues of $150 million in the 1975-76 fiscal year.

Whether he gets it all will depend on Ottawa's tax stand. When the price went up to $1 last fall after the controversy over the federal government's right to tax, Barrett said he got a commitment from Energy Minister Donald Macdonald that Ottawa wouldn't tax B.C.'s proceeds above that price "in the foreseeable future."

But some six weeks ago Finance Minister John Turner clarified the "fair market value" rule in Ottawa's policy regarding taxation of oil and gas profits earned by special provincial government selling agencies. According to him, it means the price at which gas or oil is sold by the agency, minus operating and transmission charges. It seems clear from this definition that as the price goes up, Ottawa's take will go up too, and the premier may have been overly optimistic in estimating what B.C. will get if the price of gas goes up, despite the federal energy minister's promise.

Another interesting aspect of the brouhaha is the complete switch-around in provincial Liberal policy. The Liberals in the B.C. legislature denounced the B.C. government less than two years ago for being too greedy in wanting the price to increase, but now have taken the premier to task for not being tough enough with Ottawa. Allan Williams (L — West Vancouver-Howe Sound) even suggested B.C. unilaterally turn off the tap at the border on the gas pipeline.

They dissociated themselves from the federal Liberals — they know there are no votes for a B.C. Liberal who gets too close to a federal Liberal government — and forced Barrett to defend Turner's resource taxation policy, a curious position for a provincial NDP premier.

The B.C. Liberals' main strategy in the natural gas debate seems to be to pre-empt whatever ground Barrett could hope to occupy if he came back from the April energy conference with empty hands, and decided to call an election — a strong possibility — on the issue of a fair price for the province's resources.

Before the conference ever gets under way, doubtless we're going to see more such strange political contortions.

Easter Holiday Odds and Ends

OTTAWA — On the eve of a holiday it's standard practice to clear out one's desk, or, in the case of a columnist, to clear out items of information that otherwise may lose their edge.

● Each March 26 is a special day in the House of Commons. It marks the anniversary, the 35th this time, of John Diefenbaker's election as an MP.

The former prime minister hasn't missed an anniversary for as long as he can remember. He will have to this time. He's under doctor's orders to stay at home to recuperate from his recent prostate operation.

"He's not at all happy about this," said an aide. "It wouldn't surprise me if he defied the doctor and showed up. But he really shouldn't though."

● Cabinet ministers argue often enough in private, but rarely in public. By reading between the lines it's possible to spot the cross-fire between Finance Minister John Turner and Health and Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde in a speech given by Lalonde in Antigonish, N.S., last week.

Working Poor

The opposition's demands for tax cuts, said Lalonde, were a "phoney argument" to dodge the core issue of increasing social security payments to those too poor to pay any tax at all and so unable to benefit from tax cuts.

That attack on the opposition was predictable. Except that Lalonde recently lost a major cabinet argument with Turner on exactly the same grounds — tax-cuts for the middle-class versus a guaranteed income for the working poor.

● In a recent column I reported that although I had been told reliably that Turner at one time was not at all sure he would get his first choice of deputy-minister of finance (Tom Shoyama, the deputy minister of energy, who eventually was appointed), I did not know whether Prime Minister Pierre

WILLIAM MULHOLLAND
. . . will see if bank and he click

Trudeau at any time had proposed another candidate.

Trudeau's preferred choice, I now learn, was Marshall Crowe, chairman of the National Energy Board and before that a deputy secretary of economic affairs in the Privy Council Office where he was close to Trudeau.

● Those Canadians who took for granted that the heads of their most important financial institutions were required by law or by common sense, to be Canadians will have to hang onto their illusions for a while longer.

William D. Mulholland, recently appointed president of the Bank of Montreal, and before that president of Brinco, is an American citizen. In January, Mulholland became eligible, after five years' residence, to become a Canadian. He doesn't plan, though, to jump over the wall just yet.

"If I stay in this country I certainly would intend to become a Canadian citizen," Mulholland told me. Before doing that, however, he wants to make sure "the Bank of Montreal and I are happy with each other."

● Citizens of St. Jerome, Que., who last week happened to catch the test broadcasts of a new community television station also witnessed the opening scenes in the latest Quebec-Ottawa battle over communications jurisdiction.

Videographe Warned

Videographe of Montreal, operators of the St. Jerome station, recently applied for a licence from the Canadian Radio-Television Commission. Videographe in turn is fully-funded by the Quebec government. Since the Broadcasting Act prohibits issuing a licence "to an agent of a province," the CRTC withheld the licence until Videographe demonstrated "it is in fact and in law independent."

The issue, predictably, is confused. Videographe itself has an excellent record for the kind of community programming the CRTC applaudes. Yet the station would set a precedent for direct provincial involvement in broadcasting.

The CRTC has warned Videographe not to go beyond the test broadcasts, illegal in themselves without a licence, to actual broadcasts. If the station takes this last, decisive step, a CRTC court action is certain, and with that a direct confrontation with Quebec which has its own broadcasting regulatory commission. The eventual aim of Quebec's "cultural sovereignty" policy is effective jurisdiction over communications.

King Faisal's Assassination

The assassination of Saudi Arabia's King Faisal today on the heels of Henry Kissinger's failure to secure a Mideast peace raises grave doubts about stability in the Mideast. Faisal, among all the Arab leaders, was a friend of the west. Conservative and religious he had a deep mistrust of the Soviet Union and Egypt's Anwar Sadat's flirtation with the communists. Conversely, he was a major supplier of loans, and an intermediary for war materials, often shipped to other Arab nations to bolster their fight against Israel.

Faisal was also one of the driving forces behind the Organization of Petroleum Exporting countries. As the secular and religious leader of the largest oil exporting nation in the world, King Faisal accumulated a surplus of $23 billion in 1974, making his one of the wealthiest countries in the world. In terms of modern Arab political thinking the king was a relic from another age. Slavery was only outlawed in Saudi Arabia in the mid-1960s when Faisal came to power. But he realized the need for change, allowing Saudi women to be educated for the first time, instituting home loans, medical care and even television. As the king's coffers fattened with the rise in world oil prices so did his influence among his neighbors.

He was hopeful of an eventual settlement of Arab-Israeli questions, insisting on Israel's withdrawal from occupied territory and land for the dispossessed Palestinians. But it was his abiding suspicions of the communists which made him a leavening influence in the Arab world.

His death at 68 will not only forment a power struggle in his own country where air force officers attempted a coup four years ago, it will also mean a restructuring of the leadership hierarchy among Arab nations. The mantle of Arab leadership will unquestionably fall on Egypt's Anwar Sadat. But without Faisal's cautious conservatism chances for another Mideast war could be heightened. Today the Mideast situation looks in as much disarray as it did when the smoke cleared after the Yom Kippur war.

Knew His Job

I would like to take this occasion to mention, as I am a small part of the taxi business in Victoria, that it is our loss that Constable Harrison resigned recently from the city police force. We got to know Mr. Harrison for quite a few years, as one of his many jobs was that he was in charge of the taxi detail which controls the cab business for the protection of the public here. He did his job well and was always reasonable. He knew his job and never abused his authority, but could get tough if he had to. I am sure we all have great respect for this man in our business. Fortunately, Mr. Gregory has good replacements, but we and the citizens of Victoria have lost a top and well-qualified officer.—Gordon T. S. Perkins, 2730 Queenswood Drive.

Cry for Help

A great number of people have expressed increasing concern over the effect of the current labor dispute on the education of their children. The present situation could last another week or until the end of June. As the contract being discussed is for a one-year term only, the same situation may well occur next January, and the year after, and the year after, ad infinitum. Can your child's learning ability adapt to such upheaval?

As individuals, we have very little "real say" in the over-all spending of the educational dollar, in selection of districts or schools our children may attend, or curricula they must follow; and we have absolutely no rights if we wish to allow our children to remain "uneducated." Presumably the laws governing education are devised to ensure that all children in British Columbia have equal educational opportunities. Therefore it is essential that the minister of education guarantee our children an uninterrupted education.

. . . write her in protest

the community to the minister of education. If you agree this is the only approach which has any hope of succeeding, please take the following steps:

● Write a letter to the minister of Education asking her to provide uninterrupted education for our children, or simply write HELP and sign your name.

● Place in unsealed envelope marked "schools" (envelopes containing unsigned comments might not bring a sympathetic response).

● Send your letters to school with your child — no stamp necessary. We have received the co-operation of the schools to act as collection depots, due to the uncertainty of the current postal situation. Should you have no direct school contact, sealed letters addressed "schools" can be sent to the address below.

We will collect all letters and arrange an appointment to deliver them personally to the minister of education, along with a verbal appeal. We will also ask concerned people to come to the legislative buildings at that time to indicate their support with their presence. In this way, we will try to convince the minister of our genuine concern for the future education of our children.—I. E. Camp, 3329 Kinsley Street.

Ensign Gold

I was interested in your editorial of March 19, Gilded Maple Leaf.

The Red Ensign was pure gold, a real symbol of unity, and comradeship in time of trouble. Nobody had to be punished for desecrating it, as everybody loved and respected it.

Now there are many thousands who have no use for the gilded so-called flag. I personally loathe it and wouldn't soil my hands to touch it.

What does it represent? Not Christianity, not the color or shape of a maple leaf, but twelve points to represent the 10 provinces and two territories.

When I see the dirty things flying over the cenotaph and the veterans' hospital it makes me boil.

The only symbol it seems to produce is strikes from coast to coast and disunity everywhere. Give us back our heritage and tradition and then Canada will prosper and be a place to respect.—Mrs. Margaret E. M. Derbyshire, 401-1955 Ashgrove Street.

Off the Mark

I have invariably enjoyed the articles by Allan Fotheringham as I think he is a forthright writer who does not pull his punches. However I think he is away off the mark in his March 14 article Alf's Half Million Dollar Job Without a Job.

As one who lived in the Interior and one who knows the north, in my view Alf Nunweiler has very much of a job as he is the minister in charge of northern affairs and this does not in any way compare to the three ladies who held cabinet appointments (as minister without portfolio) under the former Social Credit government. In the past, the north has been the forgotten child of Victoria and it is high time that we should have a minister who will let Victoria know that the north is still there.

In my view, there are many subjects for attack on the NDP government but paying more attention to the north is certainly not one. I have never heard of any government, on all three levels, which has not made mistakes and it is the duty of the news media to expose such mistakes and misuse of public funds but I would remind Allan Fotheringham that the north is still there and is very much entitled to the services of a full-time minister.—M. P. B. Wrixon, 301-1701 Cedar Hill Cross Road.

Intelligence Strike

Problems are always challenges. And the main challenge to solve this strike problem is to find out "who's fooling whom?" So at noon on Friday, March 14, I presented myself outside city hall atop my coffin soapbox.

And you know what? After an hour the only person who honestly admitted being fooled — was myself.

The following is a brief summary of what happened. Ringing my bell, and vocalizing "Hear Ye," I interspersed invitiations to passing pedestrians to pause, read my signs, and answer a few of my challenging questions. Soon I became a complete flop.

Yes, hundreds passed, gave a furtive look at the pickets and myself — and continued on their way. All of which proved to me: "The little man is boss, but we idiots don't know it."

A few examples to prove it. Can we deny people (including the citizens of Victoria) create the world in their own image? And if we citizens of Victoria are confused, self-centred, violent, on strike, and hating one another — whose fault is it but our own? But what's the remedy?

From my soapbox I invited evaluation and discussion, but failed. Now I reluctantly surrender myself to an overworked, understaffed, and somewhat prejudiced news media for answers.

Would it not be more sensible for labor to strike for a higher standard of intelligence than for a higher wage income? Can we deny a society or civilization is not better or worse than its teachers and students? And if we have right-thinking teachers, we produce mainly right-thinking citizens.

But if we produce mainly wrong-thinking teachers and students, we cannot help but create the almost helpless mess we find ourselves in today?

To summarize. The challenge is, must we pawns continue to permit our teaching professions to go on creating a major production of confused, self-centred, violent, drug-addicted, and unintelligent citizens? And also produce a judiciary whose main function appears to legalize and make money out of corruption, perversion of justice, wars, strikes, and out many other social ills?

The little man (who is the majority) either has to stand up — or shut up. True or false?—W. A. Scott, Victoria.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of March 25, 1915

"I first bagan to shoot five years ago in Paris," said Mademoiselle Grace La Dell, who has been giving exhibitions at the Pantages theatre this week of her phenomenal ability to pick out the tiniest target with rifle or revolver shot. "I went to the Bal Tabarin one evening with my father, who is a very fine shot, and liked it so well that afterwards I used to go by myself. I spent all my money," added the little French lady with charm of accent and gesture. In her exhibitions, Mlle. La Dell uses only .22, .32, and .38 calibre rifles, "It is possible for anyone to become a good shot," she said in an interview with the Times. "But the way that people practise, it is not the best. Just a very small spot against green, then practise, practise, practise!"

Cambodia: Corruption Is the Hallmark

By SYDNEY H. SCHANBERG

PHNOM PENH — When the insurgent offensive broke out around Phnom Penh in the early hours of New Year's Day, the Cambodian President, Marshal Lon Nol, a superstitious mystic who has been partly crippled since a stroke four years ago, was taking a holiday at the beach resort of Kompong Som on the Gulf of Siam about 140 miles from the capital.

The government radio the following morning did not report that all hell had broken loose on fronts near the capital. It said only that the Marshal had been well enough to walk five yards in the surf at Kompong Som.

The Lon Nol regime, which came to power when the Marshal and some cohorts overthrew Prince Norodom Sihanouk five years ago, has been universally described as reckless, incompetent and deeply corrupt. There is no lack of evidence for these opinions.

As Ford Administration officials talk emotionally in Washington of the shame the United States will suffer if it abandons its besieged Cambodian allies, a Filipino band croons romantic ballads to satisfied well-dessed diners on the patio of one of Phnom Penh's expensive restaurants.

The band's electric guitars have full power and the colored lights that decorate the restaurant burn brightly. The reason the electricity is on — while much of the rest of Phnom Penh is thrown into darkness by the wartime fuel shortage — is that the restaurant has a generator chugging steadily in the street outside and there is plenty of fuel to run it. The generator is an Army Signals Corps machine installed in the back of an army jeep. The restaurant is owned by a Cambodian general.

To explain how a general who earns a base pay of about $20 a month can buy a posh restaurant is to explain where much of the hundreds of millions of dollars in American aid to Cambodia has gone.

Many Cambodians have grown enormously rich on this war — but it has not been the masses of refugees, villagers and urban workers, who have been reduced to such abject poverty by astronomical inflation and corrupt practices that their children, after five years of sliding downhill on thinner and thinner diets, are now dying of malnutrition.

A general who a few days ago was given a new and important command, in what was described as part of a reform shake-up to improve the army's fighting ability, used to demand and get big bribes from restaurant owners, in full view of the patrons, in return for letting the restaurant stay open past the evening curfew hour.

Indeed, corruption has become one of the hallmarks of this government. You can buy almost anything here now: a draft exemption, a school graduation certificate, a visa to leave the country, or an automatic rifle that started out in Cambodia as American military aid.

Even the enemy, the Communist-led Cambodian insurgents, have taken advantage of this free market system. Some of the artillery shells now falling on Phnom Penh's airport have apparently been purchased from corrupt Cambodian commanders. Last year, for example, in the space of one month, five truckloads of 105-millimeter artillery rounds simply "vanished" on their way to a government military base.

At one point about two years ago, American aid money was paying the salaries of as many as 100,000 nonexistent Cambodian soldiers, "phantoms" added to the payrolls by unscrupulous unit commanders who then pocketed the pay. This graft amounted to $2-million or more a month.

Austerity edicts have been announced periodically by the Lon Nol government, under prodding by the Americans, only to be completely ignored. Imports of luxury goods were forbidden, but wines and cheeses and new Porsches kept coming in. The Exchange Support Fund, a $35-million-a-year fund consisting largely of American money that was meant to help the Cambodian government pay for crucial foreign goods needed for the war effort, was used to buy such things as imported beer and cigarette lighters.

For a long time now, neither the Americans nor the government have bothered to deny the curruption here. They simply say, weakly, that they are trying their best to combat it. In the meantime, Americans pay $500 a month in rent for villas that were built by generals and other high officials since the war began, presumably with corruption money generated by American aid.

The Sihanouk regime that preceded this one was also heavily laden with corruption, but diplomats with long service here point out that there is an enormous difference between the Prince's decadence in peacetime, when life was easy and languid in Cambodia, and the present corruption, when millions are suffering and some are being killed by arms sold to the enemy.

Contrasts between the elite and the poor are sharp in any country and have always been particularly vivid in Asia. But in Cambodia today, they are grotesque. While cabinet ministers ride to and from their air conditioned villas in chauffeured Mercedes, hungry begrimed refugees, crushed by food prices that have risen more than 1,000 per cent since the war began, hunker beside their sidewalk leantos stirring the garbage in the gutter in search of a scrap of something salvageable.

The wounded fill the hospitals wall-to-wall. When soldier-amputees recover and emerge, they begin their new lives as beggars along with the thousands of other war cripples and malnourished children who now swarm along Phnom Penh's boulevards.

War widows stand weeping outside government offices because they cannot cut through the bureaucracy. That is, they don't have the bribe money necessary to get the pensions due them. At the same time, some army commanders personally collect and keep the death benefits of soldiers killed in their units. This money, one year's salary, is supposed to go to the family of the dead soldier.

But the commander produces fake relatives, paying them a small amount for the masquerade while keeping the bulk of the money for himself,

"They don't deserve to win this war," a Western diplomat here said the other day. "The Communists may be no better and I've no love for them, but this side has treated its people so badly and so corruptly that it has forfeited all right to govern them."

Peking 'Amnesty' Aimed at Taiwan, Washington

By JOHN BURNS

PEKING — The release last week of 293 "war criminals" held in prison since Chiang Kai-shek's flight to Taiwan in 1949 was in the grand tradition of Chinese political theatre.

First came the announcement that the executive of the National People's Congress, a formal body that states its meetings at the behest of the Communist party, had met and approved an amnesty decree handed down by Chairman Mao.

The release was carried out within 24 hours and publicized with photographs showing Huang Wei, a lieutenant-general who commanded Chiang's 12th army group, standing with his head bowed and arms stretched upwards as he received official notification of the amnesty from a judge of the Supreme People's Court.

'Turn New Leaf'

After nearly 26 years in captivity and ceaseless ideological indoctrination, the men shown arrayed on the benches behind Huang displayed no obvious signs of emotion. But, blank expressions on their faces notwithstanding, the People's Daily reported that they "were filled with emotion and gratitude and one after another thanked Chairman Mao, the Communist party and the People's government for educating, remoulding and saving them, thus enabling them to turn a new leaf."

The paper added: "They expressed their determination to study hard and continue to remould their thinking from now on and contribute their share to building the socialist motherland."

The amnesty covered all war criminals condemned by the Communists who had not been executed, died in captivity or previously released. Among them were 219 officers, including 40 generals, 21 officials of the Nationalist party and government and 50 "secret agents of the Chiang Kai-shek clique," meaning men who worked in the covert intelligence and security network of the pre-1949 regime. Three others were senior political, military or police figures in the puppet states set up in Mongolia and Manchuria during the Japanese occupation.

Although the wording of the announcement suggested that not all the men on the list have become paragons of Socialist thought, "The war criminals now in custody have to varying degrees proved themselves as having changed from evil to good," the treatment they are to receive is better than that accorded to even the most model graduates of thought reform. They will have full citizens' rights, including the right to participate in the political process. Those who are fit will be given "suitable jobs" and those who are not will be pensioned and get free medical care. All will get a new suit of clothes and 100 yuan ($57) to start their new lives. And, most exceptional, those who wish will be free to go to Taiwan, have their fares paid and welcome to return to the mainland later if they wish.

Hua Kuo-feng, a Mao protege appointed two months ago to head the powerful public security ministry, told the Congress executive that the amnesty is a product of Mao's policy of "combining punishment with leniency." Taken as a compassionate measure, it cannot compare with the Allied powers' treatment of major Nazi war criminals, of whom all but the unfortunate Rudolf Hess have long since been released. But it is clear that it was not out of compassion alone that the amnesty was conceived. Indeed the purposes of the party leaders who initiated it were at least as much political as humanitarian.

Force Ruled Out

The crux of the matter is almost certainly Taiwan. After years of carrot and stick tactics, with party leaders alternating between promises to "liberate" the island and appeals to the Chiang government for secret negotiations, Peking seems to have accepted that a military solution would come only at an unacceptable cost, if at all, and that conciliation is accordingly the only viable path towards reconciliation. In this context, the Chiang generals became pawns in a propaganda game, useful for demonstrating to the island's leaders — though not to Chiang himself, who at 88 is reckoned to be beyond compromise — that the leaders on the mainland are capable of magnanimity towards their former enemies.

But if the sponsors of the amnesty had one eye on Taipei, they just as surely had the other on Washington, for it is there, in the coming months, that the crucial decisions affecting Taiwan's viability as a separate entity are likely to be taken. With President Ford committed to visiting Peking before the end of the year, the administration will have to decide whether to move forward to full diplomatic recognition of the mainland government—a step that cannot be accomplished, Peking has made clear, unless it is accompanied by a rupture of Washington's diplomatic and military ties with Taipei.

Knowing Henry Kissinger for the unsentimental negotiator he is, it is unlikely that the Chinese leaders sought to influence him with such an obvious public relations gesture, but they may calculate that it is the kind of thing to disarm whatever is left of pro-Taiwan sentiment in the Congress, whose increasing assertiveness in the foreign policy field has been well marked here.

A less obvious motive for the amnesty, but one that could be read between the lines of the People' Daily, seems to have its origins in the political situation at home. Diplomats reading the announcement were struck by the care taken to stress that the move was initiated by Mao and relayed to the Congress executive by Premier Chou, that it was the Congress representatives who ostensibly had the last word, and that it was presented to them as a manifest of the "stability and unity" of the country. In the complex world of Chinese politics, these all read like signal flares in the night — though to whom, and for what purpose, was, as always, obscure.

The background against which diplomats are assessing it is that Mao, 81, has been unwell and inactive for more than two months and that Chou, 76, remains confined to the hospital where he has been for most of the past year with a chronic heart ailment. Further, that powerful interests within the party have invoked Mao's authority for a new campaign against bourgeois ideas and habits that has the potential to develop into a wider offensive against a whole range of pragmatic political and economic policies endorsed by the full meeting of the National People's Congress in January—a meeting that was not attended by Mao and which had all the earmarks of a triumph for Chou and those around him who incline towards a more moderate path than the ideologues might favor.

One theory was that the pragmatists wanted to show that Mao and Chou are still masters of the situation, working together in behalf of moderate policies and anxious to demonstrate that the National People's Congress has their support.

According to this theory, the key line in the amnesty message was Hua Kuo-feng's statement that "the dictatorship of the proleteriat is more consolidated than ever."

On the face of it, this assertion seemed to challenge the premise on which the promoters of the campaign against bourgeois influence base their case — that the proletarian dictatorship is threatened by corrupting elements who must be ruthlessly eliminated if the revolution is not to be betrayed.

Remember When It Worked?

I had a long-standing appointment in Newfoundland the other day but naturally I couldn't keep it. My failure to see this Newfoundlander cost me money but, of course, one has to be philosophical about such trifles in Canada these days.

After all, the guys who remove snow from airport runways had waited a long time for an ill wind to blow snow on the runways so that they could then refuse to remove it. You don't see school bus drivers going on strike in July, now do you?

Halifax County school bus drivers were recently on strike. Some suggested they did not like parents driving their kids to school. Mommy is a scab. Kids who ride bikes to school may be a shade scabby too.

During garbage strikes, I confess, I have myself demonstrated a scablike tendency to dispose of my own reeking bags of fishheads, mushy vegetables, rotten meat and other potentially maggot-ridden offal.

A friend of mine would have loved to have had the skill to scab in connection with the current strike among Halifax Hospital technicians. He didn't feel qualified, however, to use his basement as the theatre for an operation on his wife's spine. They'll have to wait.

Anyway, I phoned this Newfoundlander to cancel our meeting, and I guess I was lucky to reach him at all: Employees of the Newfoundland Telephone Company were threatening to strike. I was going to send him a letter, too, but I wasn't having much luck with letters.

Three weeks had passed since I'd received any mail from Toronto. People up there owed me hundreds of dollars but, although the local bills were piling in like blood-sucking bats, I figured it would be spring before those Toronto cheques came rolling home. (And by then inflation would probably have turned them all into worthless historical curiosities.)

Let us concoct a fantasy. After a settlement gives temporary satisfaction to the airport maintenance guys, suppose the letter-carriers decide it's their turn to strike. And after the letter-carriers settle, suppose Air Canada's machinists decide they've no choice but to down wrenches.

Or perhaps the air-traffic controllers want to down earphones, but the moment they settle, the pilots figure it's time to strike for salary parity with federal cabinet ministers and an equal chance at Senate appointments.

The pilots' strike is rough, controversial and long and, by the time it's over, the inside postal workers are sour about the puny increase they got in the winter of '75. Inflation's murdering them. Time for another strike.

Strike follows strike. The mail piles up till it's a stupendous brown and white mountain, an eternally unsortable mess, the dead-letter office to end all dead-letter offices. Ecologists demand the government recycle the whole works and, desperately, Ottawa turns to the railroads to move the mail. Immediately there's a nation-wide railroad strike.

As the whole system of national mail slides into memory, the burden on Telex and telephone operators, on bus and truck drivers and busline baggage clerks, becomes insupportable. As their importance increases so do their demands.

They want a 20-hour work-week coupled with an immediate pay increase of 75 per cent (retroactive two years), plus subsequent raises geared to an index that automatically guarantees their wages will rise twice as fast as the cost of living. They go on strike.

The highway workers' strike drags on till Canadian roads look like airfields abandoned after World War I. The refinery workers' strike leaves no gasoline for any vehicles other than ambulances and food trucks anyway.

No one ever goes anywhere anymore. No one ever gets a letter anymore. "long-distance" is a forgotten phrase. But between strikes at the CBC, Canadians manage to keep in feeble, fitful touch with what's happening here and there around the country.

They seem to be specially fond of heart-warming television documentaries about brothers and sisters who've not seen one another for 35 years but — through some miracle of love and determination — get together for a tearful reunion.

The old people talk about old times, good times, and letters from home in what everyone faintly remembers as the golden age of mail in a country that was once heard to brag about its genius in the field of communications.

Three Face Deportation Under Immigration Act

A Scotsman, and East Indian and a Puerto Rican were all convicted Monday in Victoria provincial court of violating Canada's Immigration Act.

Alan T. Young, 21, of Edinburgh, received a seven-day sentence after pleading guilty to having overstayed a visit to Canada

Prosecutor Clarence Vause told the court Young came to Canada last fall with the Edinburgh University rugby team to play exhibition games in Vancouver and on Vancouver Island.

When the team went home Oct. 2, Young stayed.

Young's status came to light when he was arrested on another matter in Nanaimo.

Vause said he is under a deportation order already.

"There's altogether too much wilful defiance of the Immigration Act," Judge William Ostler said in passing sentence.

Ramesh Singh, 22, of India, was fined $100 for eluding examination by immigration officials at Victoria International Airport Wednesday.

Singh flew in from Seattle after being deported from the United States.

An immigration officer directed him to sit on a bench in the airport while he located a Punjabi interpreter, but when the officer returned a few minutes later Singh was gone.

He was picked up by police a few hours later at the bus depot, and has been ordered deported, Vause told the court.

Japu Saya, 22, of San Juan, Puerto Rico, received seven days in jail for failure to appear for examination by immigration officials

Saya crossed into Canada from the United States at Douglas several weeks ago but didn't report to immigration officials, said the prosecutor.

"It would appear in all likelihood he will be deported," Vause added.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 32-year-old Victoria man was sentenced to six months in jail Monday in provincial court for a March 13 incident in which he threatened two girls with a knife.

Barry G. Rae, 301-2523 Wark St., was given the six months on each of two charges, being unlawfully in a dwelling and possessing a dangerous weapon. The sentences will be served concurrently.

The sentence will begin when a prison term he is serving expires.

Prosecutor Clarence Vause said Rae was in the apartment of 20-year-old Cindy Ainey at 103-879 Esquimalt Rd when Ainey and Catherine Twist, 20, returned to the apartment the evening of March 13.

He brandished a seven-and-a-half-inch knife and threatened to kill them, Vause said.

Rae has a record going back to 1965, the court was told.

"There's been an alarming increase in wilful damage in this community in the last year," said Judge William Ostler as he fined a Victoria man $75.

Paul Gerald Misko, 22, of 854 Carrie, pleaded guilty to doing $25 damage to a ventilator outside the Tally-Ho Travelodge, 3020 Douglas, Saturday evening.

Fined $75 for possession of hashish was Alexander Blue Winds, 32, of 9½-527 Esquimalt Rd.

★ ★ ★

Wilfred Gordon Sample, 27, of 4036 Carey, was fined a total of $500 for impaired driving and refusing to take a breath test. He pleaded guilty.

Sample was stopped by Victoria police on Foul Bay Road at 11:25 p.m. Friday.

On Saturday Raymond John Farlow, 18, was sentenced to two days in jail for obtaining food and lodging at the Century Inn last November. Police said the youth chalked up a $317.69 bill and left without paying.

Farlow, a native of Brisbane, Australia, has also been ordered deported back to his home country. But it is not because of his conviction for fraud.

An immigration official in Vancouver said Monday the deportation order was made after he gave false and misleading information to the immigration department.

A 10-day jail sentence was set for Yvon Poulin Dubord, 19, of no fixed address, after he pleaded guilty to possession of a small amount of marijuana Friday evening.

The court was told Dubord had a previous conviction.

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall, the minister responsible for civil service bargaining, will not comment publicly on the state of negotiations.

The main bone of contention has always been the number of exclusions from the bargaining unit. The association says there should be no exclusions from the unit because most of the professionals have some form of management responsibility and it is impossible to draw the line between management and employee within professional circles.

Hall points out, however, that the Public Service Labor Relations Act, which established the professional group as one of three bargaining agents in the civil service, allows for negotiated exclusions.

The provincial secretary will expand no further on that comment but members of the association insist the government has changed its position on the matter of exclusions.

They are bitter about that issue and about the whole manner in which the professionals have been treated during the months of negotiations.

The associaiton's version of the negotiations, pieced together from conversations with individual members as well as with executive-director Geoff Holter, provides the following chronology of events:

The Public Service Labor Relations Act giving civil servants their first bargaining rights, was passed in November, 1973, and established a distinct unit for all professionals belonging to a licenced organization.

At that time, according to the record of Hansard, Premier Barrett said 99.9 per cent of the civil servants who are not cabinet appointments should have the right to representation.

Hall told the legislature the benefits of collective bargaining should be granted the maximum number of people and only those engaged in labor-management relations should be excluded.

"In fact, the premier is often on record as saying everyone should be in the union right up to the deputy minister," said Hall. "Well, we've not gone that far but .... we've gone as high as we possibly can . . ."

Most professionals were hesitant about forming a union, especially since about 90 per cent have some form of management responsibility, said Holter. But the BCGPEA had its founding convention at the Empress Hotel on Feb. 18, 1974.

The association then ran into some immediate difficulties when the 126 medical doctors in the professional group refused to join the BCGPEA and demanded to be represented by the B.C. Medical Association.

The union blames Health Minister Dennis Cocke for encouraging the doctors to go against the legislation when every other professional group also wanted their own professional representatives.

Also, according to Holter, several department heads began indicating to certain employees they would be excluded from the association.

Thus, out of about 1,100 professionals, only about 900 were actually considered possible recruitments at that time.

By May 4, however, the association had signed up the required 50 per cent and received certification as the professionals' official bargaining agent.

A negotiating team was set up and began meeting regularly, often Sunday afternoons, with members of the Public Service Commissions. It was to conclude a master agreement prior to component wage agreements.

Exclusions became a problem almost immediately, said Holter, when the government presented a list of 217 positions to be excluded — 20 per cent of the total professional group.

The B.C. Government Employees Union exclusion amounted to only 2½ per cent of its total and the nurses' bargaining unit has only one per cent exclusions, said Holter.

The matter couldn't be resolved immediately so the negotiators dealt with other issues and eventually agreed on a tentative master contract in early December. The contract covered exclusions by setting up a unique joint committee system, said Holter, which would allow the government to appoint any association member as its representative on the committee and thus take him out of the bargaining unit for the life of the committee.

Under the tentative agreement, the association would have waived the right to strike and pledged the first loyalty of professionals was to their employers.

The contract talks were concluded Dec. 11 and the official, signing of the master agreement was to take place in January, once the government had given its stamp of approval.

A date was set, said Holter, but the public service commission changed its mind and announced it had to consult with the deputy ministers before the government could give its approval.

The deputies apparently argued the contract would amount to an infringement on the perogatives of management, said Holter. The deputies, however, had no legal right to disagree with the agreement.

Whatever the reasons, the government continued to stall and finally, in late January, announced a freeze on all negotiations pending some further legislative action. The association was not given any reasons why the negotiations were cut off.

By this time, the association had run up nearly $100,000 in expenses and was still not granted a dues check-off because it had no master agreement. More than 900 professionals had joined the association and voluntarily paid some dues but the bills were still running up.

Negotiations had cost the government more than $500,000 in lost working time.

The association decided to slap an unfair labor charge against the government but on Feb. 12, before that came before the Labor Relations Board, association negotiator Wally Ross received assurances from the government that negotiations would resume.

Negotiators for the Public Service Commission said the government wished to make several proposals for changing the original contract agreement and a meeting was arranged for March 9.

Holter said he expected the association would have to make a few concessions to the government but the public service presented 77 proposals for re-negotiation including a list of 177 exclusions with a provision for more exclusions later.

The criteria for exclusions, said Holter, were based on loyalty, participation in decision making and responsibility within the department.

It was at that point one long-time civil servant literally burst into tears, not only out of frustration but because he was not among the excluded professionals and therefore not considered "loyal."

It was also at this point the association issued an ultimatum. The government, it said, was dismissing eight months of negotiations and was still unable to defend its list of exclusions.

Either the government would agree to a token 38 exclusions, two per department, or the association would disband.

Three days later the word came down from a cabinet committee: the government would agree to negotiate the number of exclusions downward but it would not agree to the 38 figure.

"The government was saying we don't want you to exist," said Holter. "They knew what they were doing when they made that decision."

But the association was not willing to abide by its own ultimatum.

Members voted unanimously to continue the association and, by a margin of 20-to-1, according to Holter, have voted to take strong action against the government.

The question of exclusions is crucial to them. The association considers itself a group of management professionals. To place some within the union and some outside of the union would be to pit professional against professional.

Most of them have some form of management responsibility, with people working under them, and thus nearly 90 per cent could be excluded on those grounds.

They feel they have been treated unfairly in other ways as well. The other two government unions settled their master agreements long ago and have been able to start collecting dues and paying off their debts.

Aside from the public reaction to the dispute, the anger and frustrations felt by the professional employees will shake the morale of the entire civil service.

A great many people are surprised to learn that they can become noticeably, even seriously, intoxicated on only one drink if they have recently taken certain types of medication.

The drugs to be particularly careful about are tranquilizers, antihistamines, amphetamines and barbiturates.

If you have taken both drugs and alcohol, it can be exceedingly dangerous to attempt to drive a car or other vehicle.

We don't want to sound preachy, but we have always believed that the right way to enjoy any beverage alcohol product is in moderation. Mixed with drugs, however, even moderate drinking is out of place.

If you suspect the medication you're taking is not compatible with beverage alcohol, you would be wise to consult your doctor, your pharmacist, or the government Department of Health.

Firm, Gentle on Curbing Shoddy Trade Practices

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

Both the federal and provincial governments are cracking down on shoddy trade practices but Victoria is dangling the carrot while Ottawa is using the whip.

The provincial department of consumer services, under Phyllis Young, believes the fastest way to improve business practices is to get the voluntary co-operation of merchants.

The federal department, under Andre Ouellet, is adopting a more direct approach: Anyone found guilty gets fined or goes to jail.

Both levels of government have been active.

The provincial department pressed charges against five companies during the first two months of this year. Then it dropped the charges in three cases where the companies agreed to voluntarily comply with terms laid down by the government.

Action in the other two cases is still pending.

Through use of a consent order, the provincial government gets speedy compliance and the company has had an opportunity to negotiate on the terms of the compliance. The company also saves face because signing of an agreement is not an admission of guilt.

Ottawa, meanwhile, has stressed court action. In the last quarter of 1974, the latest period reported, the federal department sent one man to jail and fined 16 others for violations under the federal code. Another man was placed on probation for two years.

Put behind bars was James Steven O'Brien of Dartmouth, Nova Scotia. He was convicted of advertising that his company was the only one in the area that would loan the customer a television set while his was being repaired at his shop. It was established that other TV repair companies offered similar deals. O'Brien was sentenced to two years in the federal penitentiary. (In sentencing, the judge noted that O'Brien had a previous record.)

OUELLET
. . . punishment

Among the fines:

EML Distributors Ltd. of Vancouver had advertised a sale of tape decks and speakers giving the comparative list prices. It was established in court that the prices quoted as list prices were inflated to suggest a larger saving than was in fact the case. The company was convicted and fined $150.

Japan Camera Centre Ltd. (conducting business under the names Japan Camera Centre and Japan Electronic Centre) of Toronto advertised a camera as: "list $79.95, sale $59.99." It was established in court that the company had not sold the camera above the sale price of $59.99 during the preceding year. The company pleaded guilty and was fined $500.

Gary's Give-Away Incorporated of Niagara Falls, Ont., was fined a total of $225 after pleading guilty to two counts under the federal trade practices act. The company advertised television sets with stroked-out prices followed by the sales prices. It was established in court that the stroked-out price was higher than the manufacturer's suggested list price and higher than the regular price.

Lumberland Building Materials Ltd. of Vancouver was fined $150. The company advertised factory seconds of name brand carpeting as "regular value $3.49 per square yard—$2.19." It was established in court the price of $3.49 was the regular price for first quality carpeting, not for factory seconds. The company pleaded guilty.

Patrick J. McDonnell of Malton Flowers of Brampton, Ont., was convicted and fined $100. The accused advertised "evergreens now half price." A 6-foot juniper was bought for $14.50. It was established in court that similar trees sold in the range of $16 to $25 on a regular basis and $14.50 was higher than half the price of the top rate.

General Mills Canada Ltd. of Toronto was convicted and fined $750. The company advertised a special on heavy pewter tankards. The tankards were found to be not made of pewter.

Paul Bond of Toronto was fined $1,200. He used the classified ads to sell furniture as if it was a private sale but in fact was carrying on a retail furniture business from his home. He pleaded guilty to four charges and the remaining 28 charges were dropped.

Tyrolean Village Holdings Ltd. and Tyrolean Village Resorts of Toronto were fined $100. The accused advertised chalets for rent with pool and tennis courts available. It was established in court that at the time of the advertisement neither the pool nor the tennis court had been constructed. The accused pleaded guilty.

Robert Simpson Co. Ltd. of Toronto was fined $5,000. The company advertised a chain saw "specially priced right now . . . $159.95." It was established in court the regular price ranged from $106 to $160 and there was nothing special about $159.95 except it was near the top range of the regular price. The company pleaded guilty.

Ameublement Leger Inc. of Montreal, Quebec, was fined $5,000. The company used the classified section of newspapers during an 18 month period to sell furniture, citing broken marriage contracts as the reason for the sale in most cases. In fact, it was established in court the telephone numbers in the advertisements belonged to the retail furniture store. The company pleaded guilty.

Anna Enterprises Ltd. of Halifax was fined $1,000 after being convicted of advertising a Springbok line of prestige boats under the name "Spring Bock Boat" when in fact the boat being sold was a cheaper model.

IPS Handicrafts Ltd. of Burlington, Ont., was fined $20,000. The company advertised Eskimo dolls and sealskin purses as made in Canada and authentic Eskimo design. It was established in court the dolls were imported from the United States and the purses from Norway. The words "made in Canada" were stamped in large print and the country of manufacture was in tiny print and not easy to see.

Jarman Motors (B.C.) Ltd. of New Westminster was fined $150 after advertising that the rotary engine caused no environmental pollution. It was established that it did. The company pleaded guilty.

In addition, the federal trade practice branch laid charges against Don N. Scheib of Montreal for advertising an electronic TV antenna as one that would turn ordinary house or apartment wiring into a super power antenna. The claim was found to be false and the accused was placed on probation for two years and ordered to make restitution to all customers.

YOUNG
. . . persuasion

Meanwhile, the provincial department of consumer services has been busy but has not yet sent anyone to jail or had anyone fined under the provincial trade practices act.

Charges were laid against four companies and then dropped when the companies signed agreements of voluntary compliance.

Three of the cases were publicized in Consumer Aware, a newsletter being distributed by the department.

The three companies publicized in the newsletter are Airclub International, Imperial Oil Ltd. and Texaco Canada Ltd.

The department of consumer services alleges that Airclub International did not fully disclose additional costs in connection with flights and did not adequately explain that the flights took off from Seattle rather than from B.C. points.

The company has signed an agreement of voluntary compliance, agreeing to amend the practice. Signing of the letter is not an admission of guilt.

Imperial Oil and Texaco have signed agreements of voluntary compliance after the department asked the companies to refrain from putting monthly payments in larger print than total costs in their sales catalogues to credit card holders.

Besides signing the agreements, both companies have sent letters to all credit card holders saying that single payment and monthly payment prices will receive equal prominence in future.

In addition, the Times obtained a copy of an agreement of voluntary compliance signed by Metro Toyota Ltd. of Victoria. The agreement was not publicized by the department of consumer services but information on the agreement was obtained from the document which is available to public access at the department's administration office.

In the agreement, it is stated that the department of consumer services alleges that in 1974 a customer thought he was leasing a car when in fact he was committed to buy it.

Metro has agreed to carefully distinguish the concepts of leasing and buying. The agreement was signed March 10, 1975, but compliance began much earlier.

The provincial department of consumer services has indicated it will continue to stress the voluntary consent approach during the year, although the court weapon is there in the event it has to resort to it.

Vet Pensions Issue

OTTAWA (CP) — About 1,800 retired Canadian servicemen are receiving pensions of less than $100 a month while 18,600 are receiving $300 a month or more, the Commons was informed Monday.

Defence Minister James Richardson said 44,568 retired servicemen, 4,412 service widows and 119 orphans are receiving pensions.

About 500 of the 4,412 widows are receiving less than $100 a month and 52 get less than $20 a month.

About 25 per cent, the largest single group, are in the $100-$150-a-month range and 484 receive $300 a month or more. Orphans average $53.84 a month.

Corporate Act A Step Nearer

OTTAWA (CP) — Final parliamentary approval was given Monday to a bill overhauling federal business corporation laws.

The Commons approved Senate amendments to the bill despite protests from Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) that the changes will let directors off the hook when corporations are charged with an offence.

In six of the 27 amendments "the Senate wants to change the law so that action, if necessary, can be taken only against a corporation and not against its directors or officials," Mr. Knowles said.

In all six cases, the Commons finance committee had specifically amended the bill to hold directors accountable for the actions of their corporation.

"The bill which this House sent to the other place (Senate) included the provision saying that, in certain instances, a conviction can be sought against a corporation or against its directors," he added.

"Considering the number of officers and directors in the other place, I am not surprised at what has been done. They object to this provision in the law."

Knowles, a long-time advocate of abolition of the Senate, said that in some countries directors are held responsible when their companies break the law.

"In this country we face right now what has been called the dredging scandal," he said. "I suggest that perhaps that scandal is not within the confines of the government, it is a scandal within the confines of certain corporations."

Knowles said that when bad decisions are made by corporations "they are actually made by officers or directors of those corporations and those officers or directors should be subject to the penalties of the law."

The bill applies to about 25,000 federally-incorporated companies. Another approximately 250,000 companies are registered provincially and subject to provincial jurisdiction.

PM Defends Barge Action

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons Monday there was no reason why he should have been informed earlier of bid-rigging allegations in connection with the sunken barge Irving Whale. The issue "had been resolved."

Replying to questions from Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, Mr. Trudeau said the allegations had been referred to police; a report had been submitted to the Nova Scotia government and it was decided there were no grounds for further action.

"I assumed it rested at that point and there was no need to inform me of something that had been resolved."

The RCMP report says the investigation into allegations of bribery and bid-rigging in the case did not start until four months after transport ministry officials first learned of the matter.

The report says the case was handed over to police after Michael Pitfield, then deputy secretary to the cabinet, wrote deputy transport minister O. G. Stoner about the allegations.

Donald Kerr, vice-president of Atlantic Salvage, says he was offered a $50,000 bribe in the fll of 1971 to bid high on a federal contract to salvage the oil-filled barge that sank off northern Prince Edward Island.

Trudeau says he first heard of the allegations less than two weeks ago when he returned from his European tour. But he told Stanfield that since the case rested with the Nova Scotia attorney-general, there was no reason for him to be informed earlier. He quoted Mr. Kerr as saying there was no evidence of foot-dragging or covering-up by government.

"They acted admirably," he quoted Kerr as saying.

Pitfield was following standing instructions in his office that any allegations of wrong-doing be referred to the police for investigation, he added.

4 Bands Will Play On

OTTAWA (CP) — The defence department has bowed to strong public objections and revoked its decision to do away with four regular force military bands.

The news will be sweet music to Calgary, Gagetown, N.B., Montreal and Kingston, Ont., where protests were made about plans to eliminate their military bands.

The protests were especially strong in Kingston and the Gagetown area.

The defence department announced Monday that the forces will continue with nine permanent bands but that the total number of personnel will be reduced to 319 from 399.

CP Nationalization Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — A government transport equipment corporation and possible nationalization of CP Rail were among a number of sweeping proposals by rail unions in a brief to the federal cabinet Monday.

The Canadian Railway Labor Association said in its annual brief that the rail system must be improved through adequate government regulation.

"Where it is in the public interest to accomplish this goal by nationalization or by government ownership of plant and equipment, we support such a course," the CRLA said.

An association spokesman said the brief was referring to nationalization of CP Rail as the Canadian National Railways is already government-owned.

This is the first time the association, which represents 18 unions and 100,000 workers, has mentioned nationalization of CP Rail, he said.

As an alternative, the government could raise the statutory grain rate — the famous Crow's Nest rate — to give railways enough money to pay for new equipment to handle the growing grain traffic, the brief said.

The CRLA also suggested that the government could buy a wide range of transport equipment like rail cars, trucks, container ships, aircraft and pipeline facilities to lease to transport firms.

These companies would use the new equipment when they hit shortages during peak periods. They also could lease equipment for unprofitable services.

The rail unions also recommended 100-per-cent subsidy of inter-city rail passenger service "where it is in the public interest to ease congestion of highways, improve the quality of life and to cope with pollution problems caused by other forms of private and public transportation."

The railways now receive federal subsidies up to 80 per cent for uneconomic passenger services that have been ordered continued by the Canadian transport commission.

Golfer Pat Fletcher Among Five Entering Hall of Fame

TORONTO (CP) — Five new members, representing different sports, were named Monday to Canada's Sports Hall of Fame.

The members, announced by W. Harold Rea, the hall's chairman of the board of governors, represent boxing, golf, sculling, hockey and speedboat racing.

Yvon Durelle, from Baie Ste., N.B., whose lightweight boxing career ran from 1948 to 1959, was among those named.

Durelle fought 99 times in an 11-year career, winning both the Canadian and British Empire championships. His record shows 77 wins — 41 by knockouts — and 19 defeats. He had two draws and one no contest. Two of his losses were to Floyd Patterson, who became world heavyweight champion.

From golf, Pat Fletcher of Montreal is the newest member. While working in Saskatchewan in 1954 he became the only Canadian to win the Canadian Open.

Fletcher was born in England but came to Canada at the age of four and grew up in Victoria. He became a professional golfer at 19. He also won the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association titles in 1952 and 1954.

Bobby Pearce was picked as the sculling representative. Pearce, born in Australia, served 14 years in the Canadian Navy. He is considered one of the finest scullers the world has ever seen. He came to Canada in 1930 — after winning the amateur sculling title for Australia in 1928 at the Amsterdam Olympics — and won another Olympic crown in 1932.

Joe Primeau, centre for the well-known Toronto Maple Leafs' line which also consisted of Harvey Jackson and Charlie Conacher, will represent hockey. Primeau retired as a player in 1937 but remained for many years as a coach.

Primeau won the Lady Byng trophy in the National Hockey League's 1931-32 season and was runner-up in league scoring in both 1931-32 and 1933-34.

Harold A. Wilson, formerly of Ingersoll, Ont., and now of Port Carling, Ont., is the speedboat racing member. He first started racing in 1928 and by 1933 was good enough to enter, and win a world championship.

He won other world-class titles in following years, then retired in 1949.

SOCCER SETS CONDUCT CODE

CALGARY (CP) — A code of conduct for players and coaches has been adopted by the Canadian Minor Soccer Association.

"Our association expressed considerable concern regarding young players being placed in stressful situations," said Fred Jopson of Vancouver, elected vice-president at the association's annual general meeting.

He presented the meeting with a report outlining the code, designed to teach young players to make logical decisions in the face of physical and mental violence.

It said the association believes young players should be taught by example, and administrators and coaches must conduct themselves in exemplary ways.

Coaches must also be capable and "when a parent or other interested person assumes the role of coach they can sometimes subject the player to undue stress."

The association also adopted plans to promote girls' soccer in Canada.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

The Government of Canada has come up with some help for folks trying to save for a home. It's called Registered Home-ownership Savings Plan. It works this way:

You can deposit up to $1,000 per year in your RHOSP to a total of $10,000. You deduct these deposits from your taxable income giving yourself a nice tax savings.

Here's where the Permanent comes in: we're authorized by the government to administer your Plan. But we can do better than that. We will pay you a generous 9% interest* And this interest is not taxable. So if you get started now, you can save the down payment on a home a lot sooner than you think.

Find out how the Permanent, with a little help from RHOSP, can make it easier for you to save the down payment on your home. Visit your nearest branch of the Permanent, or mail the coupon.

If you don't own a home ask about the Commerce Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan.

Apply before Tuesday, April 1ST. and let the Taxman help you save for one.

Don't write off the idea of ever owning your own home. You can now write off some of your income tax on the money you save towards one.

That's right. Starting with your 1974 income tax return you can write off up to $1,000 of your income for tax purposes annually, (to a lifetime limit of $10,000) if you put that money into a Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan.

Never heard of the Plan before? It's never been around before. But it's a great incentive to save.

Aside from the immediate benefit of income tax relief, there's the long-range benefit of accumulated interest. At the Commerce, the interest you earn is paid into your account twice a year, so you earn interest on your interest.

What that means is, if you are eligible for the Plan (you are resident in Canada for tax purposes, 18 years of age or older, currently don't own a home) and you deposit $1,000 annually, you will, in 10 years, withdraw much more than your maximum $10,000 investment. If your spouse is also eligible, together you can save $20,000 plus interest.

You can only have one Plan in your lifetime, but to start the Plan, you don't even have to be committed to buying a home. However, if that's what you eventually decide to do, you can use these savings as a down payment on a home or to pay for home furnishings. And you won't pay any taxes.

If you decide to use these savings for some other purpose, you have a number of other options. You can simply withdraw the money and pay tax on it at that time, or you can defer the payment of tax by transferring your money into a Commerce Registered Retirement Savings Plan. Then again, you could spread your tax payments over a number of years by buying an annuity to average out your income.

What is important, is that you get to the Commerce now to make a deposit. Because to be eligible for your 1974 income tax deduction, you must register before Tuesday, April 1.

Details about the Commerce Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan are available at the Commerce SMART Information Centre in any of our over 1600 branches.

When you can benefit from Saving Money and Reducing Taxes this year, and save for a home of your own in a few years, we think that's pretty SMART planning.

Night and Day, Lee Thinks About Masters

ELDER'S LONGEST YEAR IS ALMOST OVER

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Lee Elder's longest year is about to end.

And the best—or, perhaps, the worst—is yet to come.

"I go to bed thinking about the Masters," Elder said. "I dream about the Masters. I wake up thinking about the Masters."

He will be the first black golfer to play in that event at Augusta, Ga. He has had almost a full year for the pressures to build toward his April 10-13 date amid the dogwood and azalea that grace the fabled Augusta National Golf Club course.

"It might have been better if I'd won a tournament just before the Masters — like Jacksonville or Hilton Head—so there wouldn't have been so long for the pressure to build up."

But it didn't work that way.

He won the Monsanto Open in Pensacola, Fla., the week after the 1974 Masters. Under Masters rules he immediately became eligible for an invitation to the elite event.

The victory has had a profound effect on the life of this 40-year-old man who didn't join the pro tour until he was 33 and labored for 6½ seasons before finally breaking through.

It has brought him instant celebrity status. It has brought him golfing dates with the President of the United States. It has brought him cover stories in national magazines. It has brought him appearances on network television talk shows. It has brought him a guest spot in a network television special.

And, eventually, it may bring him a certain amount of wealth.

"It really hasn't meant that much, financially, just yet," Elder said.

But he does have certain contracts, including representation of a club in Virginia and a new line of golf clubs. And more are in the offing.

"I could have had a lot of 'em," Elder said. "But most of them were short-term things. And they'd require appearances and a lot of my time. I could have had enough so that I wouldn't be able to play golf but once a month.

"We didn't want that. I don't want to let the golf suffer. Besides, what we're looking for is the long-term thing, things that will bring us residuals for several years so that when I finally quit the tour we'll still have money coming in."

That aspect of their lives is handled by his wife, Rose—"she's the only manager I ever had" — his accountant and his lawyer.

"They've shielded me from an awful lot," Elder said. "I'm the kind if guy that it's hard for me to say 'no' even when I want to."

And, he said, there have been plenty of occasions when it has been necessary to say no.

"Several guys have come up to me, after I won, wanting to sponsor me. They say, 'Hey, man, let me take some of the worry off you.' There's been more than one. They just want to get in my pocket. I'm wondering where they were when I needed them."

There have been a number of fly-by-night, get-rich-quick schemes proposed to him, including a Texas golf course development that folded.

And it has affected his game. He hasn't played well since his victory. He's had particular trouble this season. He missed the cut three times in a row. He hadn't finished higher than 33rd until he tied for 17th last weekend in the Greater Jacksonville Open. He's won only $6,080, barely enough for expenses.

"Part of it is lack of practice. You can't play well if you don't practice. And I haven't had time to practise. But most of it is the Masters.

"It's constantly on my mind. I'm playing in this tournament, but I'm playing Masters shots. I'm hitting it high. I'm hitting a hook. I'm hitting the shots I'll need at Augusta.

"My game is getting there. I'm ready."

He's played the Masters course twice, once with commissioner Deane Beaman of the Tournament Players Division of the Professional Golfers Association. He'll play it again March 31 and then go to Augusta on April 7.

"I know I'm gonna be nervous," he said. "I'm nervous already. But I think I'll be okay." He has little hopes of winning—this time. But he hopes to avoid disgrace.

"It's a course like no other in the world. It's a tournament like no other in the world. It's in a different league."

Ten More Years of Ali With Joe Bugner Next

CLEVELAND (AP) — Muhammad Ali admitted he was weak after his victory over Chuck Wepner Monday night, but he said he plans to fight for 10 more years and hopes to meet Joe Bugner, the British champion, in eight weeks.

Details and site of such a fight were not discussed, except that promoter Don King, who handled the Wepner bout, said he hopes to handle i tand said he hopes to handle it and added: "At this time I think Bugner's in line."

In a post-fight interview, Ali was asked if he would give Joe Frazier a shot at the title.

"I'll fight Frazier" said Ali. "All they gotta do is come up with the $10 million. It will be $8 million for George (Foreman)," the former champion from whom Ali took the title last October in Zaire.

For 14 rounds and most of the 15th, Wepner stood toe to toe with the world title-holder, taking Ali's best shots without buckling.

Ali dropped to the lower strands of the ropes in the ninth for a disputed knockdown. Ali had tripped on Wepner's foot but referee Tony Perez called it a knockdown.

Wepner was bleeding from a cut over the left eye and his face was reddened and bruised from scores of unblocked punches. He collapsed against the ropes and dropped to the canvas.

Pluckily, the challenger groped to his feet at the count of nine but referee Tony Perez interceded. Ali was the winner by a technical knockout in 2:41 of the 15th round. It will go into the record books as a knockout because TKO's are not counted in heavyweight title fights.

The 35-year-old Wepner absorbed a tremendous amount of punishment from Ali's lightning jabs and straight rights but he kept boring in for more, drawing cheers from the spectators.

'No More Damn Pictures,' Quarry Decides to Retire

Harassed by photographers after being stopped in the fifth round of the scheduled 12-rounder, Quarry said: "No more damn pictures. I want to go with a little pride."

"I couldn't see," said Quarry, whose only real flurry of scoring punches came in the third round. "We gave it a try."

"The time has come to quit," the heavyweight said as he was escorted into a private elevator with his wife.

Quarry, now 50-8-4, weighed 207 pounds. He received $185,000. Norton got $100,000.

Blass Fizzles in Comeback

By The Associated Press

Pitcher Steve Blass is having problems with his comeback.

"Same old stuff, eh?" Blass said Monday after another disastrous outing.

It was one of many bad games the 32-year-old Pittsburgh right-hander has experienced since his career hit the skids following a 19-8 record in 1972.

He allowed 10 runs and 11 walks as Chicago White Sox defeated the Pirates 16-4 Monday to split an exhibition baseball doubleheader. The Pirates won the opener 8-2 and got some good pitching news when righthander Bob Moose, sidelined most of last season after surgery to remove a blood clot from his pitching arm, allowed only two hits and two runs in five innings.

Blass, the 1971 World Series hero who spent last season in the minors battling control problems, started the night-cap and allowed two runs over the first three innings. His moderate success came to an abrupt halt in the fourth when he walked home five of Chicago's eight runs in the inning before being lifted.

It may have marked the end of the road for Blass. Manager Danny Murtaugh said after the game that he was undecided whether Blass would get another chance. Blass has said he won't go back to the minors.

In other games, Cincinnati Reds beat St. Louis Cardinals 6-4; Philadelphia Phillies outslugged New York Mets 9-7; San Francisco Giants downed San Diego Padres 15-3; Oakland A's edged California Angels 8-7; Milwaukee Brewers shaded Chicago Cubs 7-6; Texas Rangers defeated Minnesota Twins 8-5; Detroit Tigers trimmed New York Yankees 6-5 and Atlanta Braves stopped Montreal Expos 4-2.

Winning Fails To Salve Leaf Wounds

TORONTO (CP) — A 5-3 victory over California Seals didn't seem enough compensation for Toronto Maple Leafs, still angry after Monday night's only scheduled National Hockey League game.

California captain Joey Johnston was the main target of the Leafs' anger because he clubbed Leafs winger Lanny McDonald with his stick midway in the second period.

"If that wasn't a deliberate attempt to injure, I don't know what is," said Leafs coach Red Kelly.

"It called for an automatic match penalty and the referee never even saw it happen. He had to go to a linesman to find out about it. Somehow on the exchange of penalties, we end up shorthanded and our guy (McDonald) ends up with a seven-stitch cut on his head and he's even wearing a helmet."

The incident started when McDonald threw a body check at Johnston in a corner and the California player retaliated with his stick. Leafs' Dave (Tiger) Williams then vaulted the boards and attacked Johnston, precipitating a bench-clearing incident with little fighting and mostly sweater tugging.

Johnston was handed a minor penalty for slashing, a major and a game misconduct. Williams had to serve a double minor, major and game misconduct. California's Mike Christie took a game misconduct for being third man into the Williams-Johnston fight.

LBC Gets Jump In Hoop Final

London Boxing Club downed Hotel Douglas 71-64 in the opening game of the best-of-three Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League final Monday at Royal Oak Junior High School.

Boxers held only a 32-30 half-time lead, but Jim McKay and Bob Wiley scored 10 points each as the club pulled away early in the second half.

Corky Jossul had 24 points and Tom Hatcher 18 for the Hotelmen. Usually high scoring John Lauvaas managed just four points.

LONDON BOXING (71) — Duff McCaghey 6, Jack Robinson 12, Sid Chow 4, Dave Wirtanen 2, Loris Corlette 2, Rich Connolly 5, Alf Hass 9, Jim McKay 20, Bob Wiley 11.

Canucks Set Ticket Prices For Playoffs

VANCOUVER (CP) — Top playoff ticket prices will be increased between 25 and 50 per cent, Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League said Monday night.

Canuck president William J. Hughes said if the Canucks failed to finish first in the Smythe Division, prices for Series A—a best-of-three playoff—will be $10 for reds, $8 for blues $5 for greens and $4 for standing room.

Should the Canucks finish first and get a bye, ticket prices for all remaining games will be $12 for reds, $9 for blues, $6 for greens and $5 for standing room.

Trio of Champions May Miss Playoffs

NEW YORK (AP) — A National Basketball Association playoff without New York Knicks, Los Angeles Lakers and Milwaukee Bucks, three of the league's last four champions?

It seemed impossible a year ago, especially when the league announced it was expanding the playoff field to include 10 of the 18 teams, two more than last year. But with two weeks left to go in the regular season, New York and Milwaukee are struggling to qualify for the playoffs, and Los Angeles is already out of it.

Four post-season berths remain in doubt and as many as nine teams are still trying for them.

Defending champion Boston, Buffalo and Washington have clinched three of the five spots in the Eastern Conference; Chicago, Kansas City-Omaha and Golden State have already made it in the West. But the races for the final two spots in each conference remain wide open.

New York, Philadelphia, Cleveland and Houston are in contention in the East and Detroit, Milwaukee, Seattle, Portland and Phoenix are still in the chase in the West.

The extra post-season games can mean the difference between a team making money for the year or winding up in the red.

Three teams — New York, Boston and Milwaukee showed a profit last season and all were aided by playoff revenue. Sources indicate that, had it not been for the three playoff rounds, Milwaukee would not have been in that elite group.

In the expanded playoff picture, the top two finishers in each division are joined by the remaining club in each conference with the best won-loss record, which receives a wild-card berth.

WHA HUNG UP ON NAPIER

CLEVELAND (AP) — The World Hockey Association board of governors' meeting was stalemated Monday after four hours of discussions on whether to allow drafting of hockey players under the age of 20.

The 15 board members held a special session at the Cleveland Coliseum.

Specific purpose of the board session was to rule on the Toronto Toros' signing of 18-year-old Mark Napier, a right winger with Toronto Marlboros of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series.

The Toros signed Napier prior to the WHA draft. The WHA allows acquiring the rights to players under 20, but only in the first round of the draft.

The board met to decide whether the signing was legal or whether compensation should be made to other teams.

The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association considers anyone under age 20 a junior player. It was clear that if carte blanche were given to drafting players under 20, many above-average Canadian amateurs would leave for the professional ranks.

The board set up a committee to study the situation, and the committee was to report its findings at an unannounced date.

New Rules, New Stock Cars, Maybe a New 'Popular' Driver

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

There'll be lots of new cars, new drivers and new rules at Western Speedway this season — and there may even be a new winner of the popular-driver award.

Rick O'Dell, perennial winner of the honor, isn't certain how much time and money he'll have to devote to stock car racing at the Western oval. An expanding garbage disposal business that he operates is the reason.

"We've run into a time and money problem," O'Dell explained.

Last year, he drove a 1969 Chevelle in the regular Saturday night super-stock races at Western but the car no longer meets new specification designed to make racing more competitive.

As a result, O'Dell plans to campaign the car in open competition in the Pacific Northwest when time permits. Meanwhile, he has a 1967 Plymouth he purchased from Neil Newbury of Wenatchee and hopes to make some appearances at Western with it.

O'Dell does not feel he has enough spare time to rebuild his '69 car to meet the new specifications at Western.

The new rules completely eliminate the stock car class. The claimers will continue to run, however.

The rules, reveiwed at a pre-season media luncheon today at the Tally Ho, mainly concern suspension, tires and engines. Suspensions designed specifically for racing are no longer permitted. Stock suspensions must be used, although drivers will be allowed to make their own modifications.

All super-stock cars will use the same tires. Some top drivers last year, like season point winner Gary Kershaw, used $100 racing tires that lasted no more than three races. Many drivers couldn't afford them so the Vancouver Island Track Racing Association has bought 250 tires and will sell them to Western Speedway competitors at $60 to $70 each.

"We're hoping that a driver will be able to buy eight tires to last him the entire year," track spokesman Barry Rankin said.

Engine sizes will be the same as last year but many of the racing components willi not be allowed.

With the elimination of the stock car class, models from 1955 to this year will be allowed in the super-stock category. The limit last year was 1960 and newer.

The idea, of course, is to encourage more super-stock drivers and Rankin said that at last count, 40 local cars had registered in the class.

"We would hope to have anywhere from 24 to 30 super-stocks available for racing each night. We'd like to come up with bigger fields than we had last year. The track can accommodate up to 24 cars in a race but we never got that many in a super-stock feature last year."

The economic slowdown has hit Western a little. A half-dozen cars from up-Island haven't registered this year, but most of the top name drivers are back.

Kershaw, who dominated racing last year, will drive a new Chevelle that meets the rules and Harvey Chipper is back as his chief mechanic. His 1965 Chevelle ahs been sold to Roy Haslam, who also plans to compete at Western, at least on a limited scale, while campaigning the old Kershaw car in open competition.

Modified (sprint car) races are planned and reports have it that driver Roy Smith and owner Geoff Vantreight are building a new Daffodil Special. Ray Pottinger is also rebuilding the Island Pacific Special he campaigned last summer.

New Match-Play Event For Island Assistants

The silverware originally went to Vancouver Island Open winners for almost two decades. It went into retirement when CFAX Radio took over sponsorship of the Island match-play tournament.

Tedd Genest, Carroll's assistant, thought Vancouver Island's assistants might bring it back into circulation.

It will be presented to winners of a new match-play tournament for assistant pros.

At the moment, their tournament will be governed by loose-and-easy arrangements. Meaning the assistants will arrange matches at their convenience.

By late summer, they hope to declare a champion who will then challenge the Vancouver district champion for B.C. honors.

★ ★ ★

On the subject of match play, time is running out for anyone interested in entering the Island Open.

The entry deadline is Wednesday.

Most of the better players in the district have entered. The list includes defending champion Cec Ferguson of Gorge Vale and the always-threatening Bill Wakeham of Cowichan.

Colwood's Bill Court, who hasn't missed starting since the original Times Trophy was put up for competition, heads the faithful old guard.

The district's first recognized event was marred, however, by the disqualification of Uplands' Mike Gray. The leader after Saturday's round with a two-over 72 at Colwood, Gray missed his tee-off time by 15 minutes.

He was apologetic and was well aware of the penalty. Although he started out with a later group and came in with a 77 at Gorge Vale to finish with a 149 total — six strokes behind Ferguson — he had no argument with the tournament committee's decision.

It's happened to Gray before, and the rule is cut and dried.

★ ★ ★

He may have been cutting technicality with a fine hair, but a district golfer may have been wrong when he suggested retired U.S. professional Al Zimmerman is not eligible to compete for prize money in our tournaments because he isn't a member of the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association.

Zimmerman, now living in Sidney, is a life member of the U.S. PGA.

My information from professionals says Zimmerman is definitely eligible. The covering clause says, in effect, he's okay "as long as he is a member in good standing of any recognized professional golfers' association."

Many U.S. pros who come north to campaign in Canadian events, such as the B.C. Open, aren't ruled ineligible. As long as they are recognized by the U.S. PGA, they can play in Canadian events and claim whatever money they win.

★ ★ ★

The city open buttons went to Glen Meadows Sunday when challengers Brian Sluggett and Marty Richards defeated Uplands assistant Bryan Carbery and Russ Reynolds, one up, at Glen Meadows.

The button battles wind up next week when the new holders make their defense against a Gorge Vale combination to be declared later this week.

Curling's Upper Crust Includes Moore Rink

Everything appeared to be strangley balanced going into this morning's fourth round of the provincial senior men's curling championship at Victoria Curling Club.

Four of the rinks, including the host club quartet skipped by Gordie Moore, were unbeaten with 3-0 records. The other four were at 0-3.

Moore's rink of Bill Purdy, Jack Parr and Bert Edwards had little trouble in defeating Gordon Hewgill of Vancouver 12-4 and Harry Hackman of Summerland 13-3 on Monday after their opening-round 12-3 Sunday win over Gerry Garoz of Courtenay.

Joe Hadfield of Chilliwack, Fred Harris of Kelowna and Jim Burrows of Fruitvale also emerged with unbeaten records.

Hadfield downed Garoz 9-6 and Al Lunn of Prince George 11-3; Harris bounced Lunn 14-3 and Hewgill 5-3 while Burrows tumbled Hackman 14-4 and Garoz 7-1 in other Monday rounds.

The final two draws are scheduled for 9:30 a.m. and 2 p.m. Wednesday in the over-60 affair which annually pits the four zone winners from the Pacific Coast Curling Association against four survivors from the B.C. Curling Association.

Moore 13, Hackman 3.
Hadfield 11, Lunn 3.
Burrows 7, Garoz 1.

Saskatoon Rink Posts Key Win

WINNIPEG (CP) — Harvey Uhryniw and his Saskatoon rink scored a key 8-6 win over Northern Ontario to remain alone atop the Canadian fire fighters curling championship standings going into today's final round.

The win left them with eight wins and one loss and only Don Nelson's Calgary rink to worry about. The Alberta foursome easily beat Quebec 10-3 in the 10th round to improve their record to 7-2 and keep alive the playoff possibility.

HOOP TITLE TO DONCASTER

Doncaster, winner of the girls' crown Monday, was scheduled to meet George Jay for the elementary school boys' basketball championship today.

Diana Thorntorf dunked 15 points to lead Doncaster to a 21-14 victory over Lampson in the final of the 22-team playoff at the University of Victoria's old gymnasium.

TAYLOR IN RUNNING FOR COACH AWARD

Gary Taylor, who coached UVic Vikings to a first-place finish in the Canada West University Athletic Association men's basketball league this season, is one of five nominees for the coach-of-the-year award to be presented by the National Association of Basketball Coaches of Canada.

Taylor's Vikings were the surprise of the year in Canadian college basketball. What began as a rebuilding season ended up a success when the Vikings completed their schedule on top and narrowly lost to UBC Thunderbirds in the playoff.

The award will be presented later this spring. Other nominees are Don Hunter of the Manitoba Bisons, Bob Bain of York Yeomen, Doug Daigneault of Loyola Warriors and Gary Heald of Prince Edward Island Panthers.

LANSDOWNE WINS TITLE

Lansdowne Junior High School defeated Vancouver College 73-44 Sunday to win the provincial bantam boys' basketball championship at Edmonds Junior High in Burnaby.

Wayne Bryan paced the Victoria club with 27 points with Craig Higgins adding 15.

Lansdowne finished the two-day tournament undefeated. Saturday, the team trimmed Edmonds 59-27 and Rossland Royals 71-21.

Fabris Justifies Ranking

OTTAWA (CP) — Lucio Fabris of Creighton Mines, Ont., is the top entry in the Canadian junior badminton championships and tonight will appear in three final events.

Ranked first in the country, Fabris proved his rating Monday by earning a place in the men's singles, men's doubles and mixed doubles finals.

He defeated Ian Johnson of Oakville, Ont., 15-5, 15-0 in the singles, teamed with James Muir of Toronto to defeat Rodney Freeman of Moncton and Britt MacLeod of Saint John, N.B., 15-7, 15-7 in the men's doubles and then paired with Penny Parkes of Woodstock, Ont., to win the mixed doubles semi-final 15-4, 15-17, 15-12 over Darryl Wood of Edmonton and Wendy Clarkson of Calgary.

Miss Clarkson, also top-seed in her division, also will appear in the women's doubles final with Tracy Van Wassenhove of Edmonton.

MACDONALD MUM OVER DICEY STOCK ISSUES

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald refused in the legislature Monday to name any stocks on the Vancouver exchange which might not be legitimate.

Last week Macdonald told reporters there are some "Monte Carlo goings-on" in the Vancouver Stock Exchange and some junior stocks are not legitimate ventures for the public to invest in.

Liberal MLA Garde Gardom (Vancouver-Point Grey) asked Macdonald Monday if he was prepared to give some specific examples to back up his charges "in fairness and to protect the thousands of investors who use the Vancouver Stock Exchange."

But Macdonald would not be specific and said only that his duty was to warn the people of B.C. to be on guard when making investments.

He said he was concerned about the ease with which stocks can be listed on the exchange and he said officials at the exchange are equally concerned about that problem.

He called Macdonald's criticisms "shotgun attacks" and he said more than 90 per cent of the stocks listed on the VSE since the NDP took office had been approved by the attorney-general's department.

No Promises on Municipal Funds

Municipal representatives met with Premier Barrett Monday but received no firm indication of how much provincial funding they will receive this year.

The only promise they did receive was an assurance the Premier will contact them as soon as he finds out the new export price of natural gas.

This year's budget calls for municipalities to receive, in addition to per capita grants, one-third of the additional revenues from an increase in the export price of natural gas.

Barrett goes to Ottawa April 10 for a federal-provincial conference and expects to negotiate then an increase in the $1 price of one thousand cubic feet of gas.

If Barrett wins the $1.50 price he is hoping for, it will mean $20 million in additional revenues for municipalities.

Union of B.C. Municipalities president Kay Grouhel of Ladysmith said Monday's meeting was "very successful" and Barrett promised to notify them immediately of any gas price increase so municipalities will know the extent of their revenues before the May 15 deadline for their new budgets.

Grouhel said the premier assured her he was confident the federal government will agree to a price increase but he made no promises about the amount of revenue the new sharing formula will bring in.

Dramatic increases in costs will mean the average taxpayer facing a 20 to 30 per cent increase in property taxes this year unless there is some additional relief, said Grouhel.

If local governments do receive $20 million from natural gas revenues it will amount to $13 per capita, she said. For some municipalities that might eliminate tax increases but for others it will have little effect.

But the additional revenues may not be distributed by way of per capita grants.

UBCM officials are meeting with Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer to work out a formula for sharing the money and it may be different from the per capita system.

While emphasizing the need for more funding, the brief said the municipalities did not feel a direct share of natural gas revenues will provide them with a reliable revenue source indefinitely.

Energy resources are not an appropriate basis for revenue sharing, said the brief. Instead, an automatic annual escalator factor, tied to income tax revenues received by the province, should be applied to the existing per capita grant system.

Party Leaders Offered Name of Arab Lender

Premier Barrett offered Monday to tell opposition party leaders the name of B.C.'s secret Arab money lender but he challenged them to use the information responsibly.

Included in B.C. Hydro's agreement to borrow $200 million in petrodollars was a guarantee the name of the lending country would be kept secret, but opposition members have repeatedly requested the government divulge the name.

Barrett finally said in the house Monday he would privately tell the three opposotion party leaders the name of the country if they would promise to keep it confidential.

If, however, any of the leaders found disagreement with the name of the country they could take it upon themselves to publicly reveal the name and state their opposiion.

The premier has accused the opposition of playing cheap politics by using innuendo to imply something sinister in the nature of the loan.

Outside the house, Bennett said he would have no part of "a conspiracy of silence" involving public funds.

He said he would not put himself in the position of being a censor of public informaiton.

Liberal leader David Anderson said Barrett should not have made any agreements on secrecy in the first place but he would like to know the name, provided all three leaders are told at the same time.

But the knowledge might put him in a difficult position, he said, if he genuinely has some moral complaint about the lending county.

Barrett might feel certain about his own opinions, said Anderson, but another politician might have a different political and moral reaction to the country involved.

Conservative leader Scott Wallace said he has never been particularly interested in the name of the lender since he is not aware enough of the different political climates in each Ara bstate.

But Wallace said he would probably be curious about the origin of the loan and would likely go along with Barrett's plan.

–ANDERSON
. . . would like to know

Welfare Cut Claimed Half-Truth

A Socred MLA Monday accused Premier Barrett of telling half-truths about the number of social assistance recipients in the province.

Don Phillips (South Peace) said in the legislature Barrett was misleading the public when he stated the number of people receiving welfare in B.C. has decreased.

Phillips was referring to Barrett's comment Saturday at a social gathering of NDP members from three Burnaby ridings that there are fewer British Columbians on welfare under the NDP government than there were in the last months of the Social Credit regime.

The premier said that 6.4 per cent of the population was on welfare then compared to the 4.9 per cent rate now.

Phillips said the premier failed to mention that one of the reasons for the declining welfare rolls is that a number of former recipients were transferred to Mincome

"The premier didn't mention that," said Phillips.

He accused the premier of twisting the truth to suit political advantage, but he withdrew his comment on the direction of chairman Hartley Dent.

Liberal Filibuster Denied On Barrett Office Budget

Liberal leader David Anderson has refuted Premier Barrett's charges that the Liberal opposition is attempting to filibuster debate on estimated spending in the premier's office.

Discussion on the premier's estimates dragged into its second week Monday leaving only 112 hours of debate for the government's remaining 19 department estimates.

In an interview Anderson said "it's a ridiculous charge — absolutely not."

He termed "dictatorial" the government's new limit on debate — a total of 135 hours or 45 sittings.

He described the time limit as a form of closure.

"I voted against it (the limit passed last Spring) and I'm opposed to it. The government brought in the rules, forced them through the legislature against the wishes of the opposition."

On Monday Barrett passed up most chances to retaliate.

"I've been trying to listen to you guys for the last whil to you guys for the last while and I regret it," he said, in questions.

Anderson said Barrett is trying to take up allowed time for debate with his own estimates, leaving less time for more controversial departments.

The last estimates to be discussed are those of the department of transport and communication, covering the Insurance Corporation of B.C.

Tory Leader Scott Wallace said it's clear that if the Liberals continue repetitive debate the time limit will run out before ICBC can be discussed.

Wallace said he is not aware of any combined opposition strategy, but admits the Liberals are being tiresome.

He said Liberal MLA Pat McGeer (Vancouver-Point Grey) gave the same speech on natural gas export prices three times.

The Liberals, he said, have decided to focus attention on the natural gas issue because they are at odds with the federal Liberal party and Barrett might use the issue for an election, said Wallace.

"Barrett is the NDP government. He has the influence and popularity far ahead of the party and the Liberals have chosen to hammer away at him."

Cost-Sharing Agreements Reached

The B.C government has reached a number of tentative agreements with Ottawa concerning federal-provincial cost-sharing in economic devclopment.

Economic development minister Gary Lauk said he met Monday with Don Jamieson, federal minister of economic expansion, to discuss various programs.

Lauk said northeastern B.C. was established as a development priority and "a couple of subsidiary agreements" will be signed soon.

"In the next several months in the 1975-76 iscal ear e'll be signing suwbsidiar agreements aefyctin

"In the next several months in the 1975-76 fiscal year we'll be signing subsidiary agreements affecting all regional areas."

Average federal contributions to the province, under an umbrella agreement signed last year, should be $50 million and up a year, he said.

Committee Head Chosen

The Kamloops MLA was elected at the organizational meeting of the all-party committee which will study agricultural matters during the session. Committee secretary is Don Lewis (NDP-Shushwap).

Elected chairman of the select standing committee on standing orders and private bills was NDP MLA Don Lockstead (Mackenzie). Secretary is Daisy Webster (NDP-Vancouver South).

Ads Ambiguous –Nicolson

Provincial government newspaper advertisements concerning the deadline for homeowner grants are ambiguous, Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson said Monday.

Hugh Curtis (SC-Saanich and The Isalnds) asked the minister if he has received inquiries about the advertisements regarding various ambiguities and the minister replied, "yes."

Asked if the advertisements were going to be corrected Nicolson replied the mistakes would not happen again.

High Pay to Smoke

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is paying a few carefully selected University of Maryland students $25 a day to smoke marijuana so scientists can study the drug's effect on brain activity. The experiments are being carried out in a hospital under the sponsorship of the National Institute of Mental Health and the National Institute on Drug Abuse. To qualify a student must have used marijuana at least six times in the previous year, and must expect to use it again.

Cocke to Meet Hospitals, Interns

Health Minister Dennis Cocke was to meet separately this afternoon with interns and hospital representatives in an attempt to solve their 10-day-old dispute.

Cocke said he has been monitoring the effects of the strike by members of the Professional Association of Residents and Interns (PARI) and has determined there is no evidence of a threat to patient care.

But the minister said he decided to call in representatives of PARI and the B.C. Health Association, bargaining for the hospitals.

He would not say what course of action the government could take since it has no legislative authority at this point to intervene.

PARI members have been booking off sick to enforce their request for parity with interns and residents in Ontario, who receive about $4,000 a year more than in B.C.

They are also requesting an arbitration clause in their contract to prevent future disruptions of service.

Cocke said he has no magical solution to the problem but he will discuss possible solutions with both sides.

PARI president Dr. Craig Beattie said 298 of the 315 residents and interns in the province are on strike.

Spokesmen from all three opposition parties applauded the move by Cocke and Tory leader Scott Wallace called it a "dishonor to the medical profession" that interns would book off sick as a method of striking.

LABOR BOARD CALLED

VANCOUVER (CP) — A third party will become involved in the provincial firefighters' dispute following a meeting Monday between the firefighters and the executive of the British Columbia Government Employees Union.

Spokesmen for the 84 firefighters striking three provincial areas said the B.C. Labor Relations Board has agreed to hear the dispute Wednesday between them and the 2,000-member component of the BCGEU to which they belong.

The firefighters, whose administrative staff has walked out at the University of B.C. endowment lands, Riverview Hospital in Coquitlam and Tranquille School in Kamloops, said they don't want to be gorgotten by the BCGEU component, which is holding a ratification vote on a tentative agreement worked out with the government.

Firefighters' spokesman Steve Norden said the strike will continue even though voting is under way.

School Building Program Gets Review by Dailly

The provincial government is reassessing its procedure for approving capital expenditures in B.C. schools, Education Minister Eileen Dailly said Monday.

She said her department is going over the process — criticized by school trustees for being too cumbersome — and soon will make recommendations.

"If there's a hold-back in the capital expenditure programs for schools I want to speed it up myself," Dailly said following a meeting with representatives of the B.C. School Trustees Association.

Headed by president Eileen Madsen, the trustees expressed concern about irrelevant planning standards and administrative delays in approval of construction.

DAILLY
. . . reassessment

In a brief, the delegation said school building standards used by the department are out of date and budgets for renovations for existing buildings are "unrealistic and inadequate."

The document outlines 51 steps necessary for school boards before provincial approval of capital expenditures.

"There is very little authority and responsibility in this procedure for the school districts to exercise, and it is respectfully suggested that the existing procedure which you inherited is inconsistent with your government's commitment to increase autonomy for school boards," says the brief.

The department of education keeps a closer watch on construction progress than is necessary, it adds.

The delegation took issue with increasing need for school operations on a shift system, and stressed that reduced class sizes will not be achieved until more classroom space is provided to accommodate the additional teachers hired under the government's program to reduce pupil teacher ratio.

In the absence of necessary classrooms, boards will tend to hire non-teaching professionals rather than teachers, it says.

Madsen said the minister was sympathetic, and indicated the department would move quickly to eliminate time lapse in approval procedures.

BCSTA director Peter Bunn was less hopeful for an immediate solution to the problem, but added that at least Dailly had agreed that the present system is cumbersome and promised to look at the proposals.

"It's about 10 years since I first made some of these suggestions to a minister of education and I've now made them to three successive ministers," Bunn said.

"I'm still saying the same thing — we are building tomorrow what we needed yesterday. Nothing has changed."

There are a few things you should know about the rent increase limit.

THE RULES:

- Effective January 1, 1975, residential rent increases are limited to 10.6% of the rent presently being charged. This rule applies to any dwelling containing two or more rented units, and will be administered by the Rent Review Commission. The rule also applies to single family dwellings.
- Tenants can legally refuse to pay any rent increase over the 10.6% limit, subject to the exceptions specified in the legislation. Tenants cannot be evicted for non payment of illegal rent increases.
- There must be at least a twelve month interval between one rent increase and the next, and tenants must be given at least three months' notice of any rent increase.
- Notice of Rent Increase forms, supplied to landlords by the Rent Review Commission, must be used. These are the only valid forms for notice of any residential rent increase.

SOME EXCEPTIONS:

- Half a duplex, when the owner lives in the other half (or basement suite, when the owner lives in the remainder of the house) is exempt from the 10.6% limit.
- Certain major renovations may entitle an owner to increase rents over the 10.6% limit. These improvements must have been started since May 3, 1974, and do not include normal maintenance and repairs. Landlords may consult the Rent Review Commission for details, particularly if planning renovations which might justify rent increases.
- Residential premises, except mobile home pads, being rented for the first time on or after January 1, 1974, are exempt from the 10.6% rent increase limit for a period of five years.
- Premises renting for more than $500 per month are exempt from the 10.6% increase limit.
- Mobile home pad rent increases may exceed 10.6%, but only if prior approval is received from the Rent Review Commission.

Questions relating to landlord-tenant matters other than rent increases should be directed to the Office of the Rentalsman, 525 Seymour Street, Vancouver, B.C. V6B 3H7. Telephone: 689-0811. Out of town, call collect.

A brochure titled The Rent Increase Limit and its Exceptions is available upon request, from the Rent Review Commission office, or from your nearest Government Agent office.

Last Words Fatal

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — The final radio exchange took only nine seconds. But it contained a one-sentence error that sent 16 persons to their deaths.

C. B. Walk Jr., regional federal aviation adminstration director, played the tape recording at a news conference Monday.

"Seattle, four-zero-six-four-one is level at 10."

That was the pilot of a U.S. Air Force C141 Starlifter jet transport giving his identification numbers and telling Seattle air traffic control he had levelled off at an altitutde of 10,000 feet.

At that moment the plane was approaching the Olympic Mountains with jagged peaks of nearly 8,000 feet to cross on the final leg of a flight from Japan to McChord Air Force Base, Wash.

"Four-zero-six-four-one, maintain five thousand."

That was the traffic controller telling the pilot to descend to 5,000 feet.

That was the key — the order to drop to 5,000 feet. The controller made a mistake. He had meant the command for a Navy A6 plane in the same area.

But the C141 pilot didn't question the controller. He responded tersely, "five thousand, fourzero-six-four-one is out of 10.."

About three minutes later the Starlifter — then travelling at an estimated 275 miles per hour — slammed into the 5,900-foot level of Warrior Peak in the Mt. Constance range of the Olympics.

Ten crewmen and six navy passengers died.

"It was human error," Walk said. "None of us in the northwest region can recall an accident of this type before."

Walk said the controller who gave the erroneous instruction was a fully qualified journeyman who had worked at the exacting task since March 18, 1973, following three years of training.

He said the controller, whom he did not identify, had been relieved of his duties.

Walk said the controller knew something was wrong when another controller — the one who would give final instructions for landing at McChord south of here — came on the frequency and asked: "... where is Mac four-zero-six-four-one?"

Walk said the controller didn't discover his error until about an hour later when he had left his station and played the tape recording.

The final transmission before the controller quit for the night came at 30 seconds past 11:04 p.m. — one final call to four-zero-six-four-one to respond.

There was no one to answer.

MLA Slams Logging Watershed

COURTENAY — Comox MLA Karen Sanford is opposed to logging the entire 310,000-acre Tsitika-Schoen watershed on northern Vancouver Island.

"Although the final decision will be made by the Environmental and Land-Use Committee, my position is that logging the entire area — the last unlogged watershed on the east coast of Vancouver Island — would be unwise," she said Monday.

She said job protection would figure largely in deliberations of the committee.

"While some environmentalists seem to ignore this factor, blind acceptance of dire predictions of massive layoffs is equally unrealistic," she added.

Sanford said she favored a provincial park at Schoen Lake, and allocation of some special status to the Tsitika area.

Four public hearings were held this month to determine the future of the watershed.

Resources Minister Robert Williams indicated it could be several months before any decision is made.

Trade Lost, Says Human 'Light Bulb'

A 34-year-old Victoria construction worker, Slavko Brajkovic, will never be able to work again at his trade because of injuries suffered in a 1973 industrial accident, B.C. Supreme Court was told Monday.

He was injured while working at a construction site at Craigflower Road and Carrie June 2, 1973, after the main line of a crane came into contract with high-voltage power lines, said his lawyer, Dr. J. J. Gow.

Brajkovic is alleging negligence and claiming damages from Capital Builders, framing contractor at the site and owner of the crane, and crane operator Richard Kruysifix. D. H. Gray is representing Capital Builders and Edward Pollard is representing Kruysifix.

Brajkovic, now unemployed, said he took hold of both 25-foot slings where concrete blocks and barrels of mortar were being placed on pallets to be lifted on to the apartment building where his company, Slavko Masonry, was building a fire wall.

"I made two steps. I felt like a light bulb. All my body was shaking from the electricity," he told Mr. Justice J. G. Gould.

He tried to pull away from the slings, couldn't, and became unconscious. Later, when he woke up, he had "tremendous pains" in his hands and legs.

Plastic surgeon Dr. Paul Gareau said Brajkovic suffered second and third degree burns to both hands, the right outer thigh and the right leg below the knee. Most of the burns were third degree — where anything from the skin below is killed by the burn.

The right leg had to be amputated below the knee and the hands remain "badly contracted and fixed. The fingers cannot be straightened."

"This is a major injury, one from which many would not survive initially," he said

"It's very close to a useless pair of hands he has."

Dr. James Warren, an orthopedic surgeon, told court Brajkovic "could not carry on masonry or similar work, nor will he ever be."

Asked if this will be for all time, he replied "I would say so."

Both doctors agreed that light work such as supervising others could be done by Brajkovic, without manual labor.

Dr. Gow said Slavko Masonry was engaged to do the furnace chimney, fire wall and garbage chute work by Stanrick Developments Ltd. Capital Builders, the framing company, supplied a 14-ton mobile crane operated by Kruysifix to lift the fire wall materials to the third floor.

Brajkovic, he said, "took the full shock of the current."

Brajkovic told the court his only income at present is a provincial disability pension of $233.34 a month. He said he didn't get workers compensation because he wasn't an employee but owned the masonry firm.

TOWN TALK

We thought we were on to a good story this past month and phoned all over — from Alaska to Ottawa — checking it out.

We were tipped an FBI agent had lived at 3180 Stevenson Place in 1971.

Intriguing, in view of this country's touchiness about such American intrusions.

The FBI and RCMP said they knew nothing, but with the help of some business people we finally got the name of a man who lived in the house about the time the rumor put him there — November and December, 1971.

We phoned Joe Marion, FBI liaison man for Canada in Ottawa, and told him we had this name — John William Whaley — and asked him to look into it.

Joe, quick to please, phoned back the next day.

Yes, indeed, Whaley was a special agent working out of the Los Angeles FBI office and yes, he'd rented the house in Saanich.

But no, he said, there was nothing clandestine about the deal . . . he'd rented it for his son, also named John William, then age 18, who was attending the University of Victoria!

It's not too clear what a professional motivator does, but it is known that this one charges $800 an hour to do it.

What motivated the chamber to present Connell at a public meeting is that someone else is picking up the tab, says chamber manager Brian Small. Connell is coming to motivate the Canadian Association of Broadcasters the same day in Victoria and that organization is sponsoring Connell's appearance at the chamber meeting.

MacKay would never have known of the mistake but for Wallace.

"They didn't send me a copy," he said, "I guess they saw no point in sending me one, seeing I wasn't around."

Budget Crunch Pressuring Region Heads

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Senior staff at the Capital Regional District office were scurrying today through last-minute preparation of a $7.5 million budget bylaw which has to be passed Wednesday by the regional board.

The Municipal Act requires regional districts to adopt their annual budgets by the end of March and Wednesday's meeting will be the last before the deadline.

A two-month strike-lockout of civic employees has left the burden of budget preparation on the shoulders of a handful of senior personnel.

Dennis Young, the board's executive director, said today that if the board missed the deadline with its budget bylaw, any spending covered by it could be challenged by anyone and might be declared invalid.

The budget bylaw really covers 24 individual budgets for a variety of programs in the region, most of which do not effect all residents.

The $7.5 million total is deceptive because it includes a number of items for which the region will receive a counterbalancing subsidy, said Young.

For example, $2.6 million is earmarked for community health services but the provincial government will provide 70 per cent of this.

And there will be close to $1 million in the budget to cover financing the region has arranged with the Municipal Finance Authority. But the regional district simply acts as agent for five local municipalities in arranging the long-term loans and repayment will come from those municipalities.

Parks and planning budgets are ones which affect most regional residents but there are many smaller budgets covering isolated projects. The Juan de Fuca recreation complex is one example, where the park gets tax support from two electoral areas only, the swimming pool from three and the arena from two, Young said.

Heart Team Rolling

The open heart surgery unit at Royal Jubilee Hospital is now doing four and sometimes five operations a week but there can still be a wait of up to three months for patients.

Two operations were done Monday to bring the total performed since the unit opened in July of 1973 to 262.

Mortality rate from the sophisticated surgery is running between 2 and 3 per cent, which is a "very, very good" record, Dr. A. C. Pickles, Jubilee's executive director, said today.

The unit, only one of its kind on Vancouver Island, uses a heart-lung machine so the surgical team (about 10 doctors, technicians and nurses) can work on a patient's heart at rest.

Most common operation is the so-called bypass, in which tiny sections of vein taken from a patient's leg are grafted around blocked arteries on the patient's heart. The unit also repairs and replaces faulty heart valves.

Pickles said there are plans to do six open heart operations a week "but we're not there yet." Providing staff and facilities for the intensive post-operative care required is causing the delay.

Gov't Wage-Price Controls Proposed by Local Teachers

Government controls over wages, prices, profits, dividends, interest and rents will be proposed by Greater Victoria delegates to the B.C. Teachers' Federation annual meeting in Vancouver next week.

The Greater Victoria Teachers' Association will propose that the BCTF support wage and price controls and urge the provincial government to co-operate with the federal government in implementing the controls.

The resolution is one of 27 by local teachers' associations which will be voted on by the 700 delegates at the meeting.

It was proposed to the GVTA by teachers from Oak Bay senior secondary school and passed by a narrow margin, GVTA president Mavis De Girolamo said today.

"By condoning inflation we support stealing from those who through their working lives saved for their retirement, including our former colleagues," Oak Bay teacher Dave Reimer said in a supporting statement to the resolution.

We live in a time when genuine world shortages are beginning to appear, Reimer said, so we cannot rely on continual growth and expansion to solve our economic problems.

He said we must accept that at some point the economic pie won't get any bigger, so we will have to work out a fairer method of dividing that pie.

"This (government controls) is surely the only fair and sensible procedure to settle wage and salary disputes for all groups," he said.

"However, we cannot expect labor unions to agree to this procedure as long as manufacturers and or entrepreneurs are allowed to charge all the traffic will bear."

Oak Bay senior teachers proposed a second resolution which was also approved by the GVTA membership, and will be discussed at next week's annual meeting.

The resolution is that the BCTF support the continuation of annual government scholarships for high school students.

BCTF policy currently opposes the scholarships.

The GVTA will have 15 delegates and three geographical representafives at the annual meeting, the largest delegation outside of the Lower Mainland.

A resolution from the South Vancouver Island District Council, representing teachers south of Nanaimo except for Greater Victoria, proposes an amendment to the Public Schools Act to allow teachers to run for school board seats.

Besides the resolutions, 80 recommendations from BCTF executive and BCTF committees and task forces will be considered at the meeting.

Among the most important are recommendations from the Education Finance Committee that the provincial government progessively assume a greater share of the cost of elementary and secondary education, aiming at an 80 per cent provincial share by 1980.

The committee proposes that the government expand property taxes to cover currently exempt property such as church and government property, and that education taxes be removed from all residential property.

Tantrum Started Him Off

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

It all began on his fourth birthday.

He threw a tantrum, heaved the toys across the room and wasn't reconciled until his father bought him the real thing.

He's been carpentering ever since.

He and his wife Betty are visiting Victoria after watching Matthews' biggest project to date sail into San Francisco Bay.

She's the replica of Sir Francis Drake's Golden Hind which is destined to be a floating museum at Fishermen's Wharf.

Matthews made all her guns 14 sakers (six-pounders), four falcons (2½-pounders) and four esmerils (swivel guns) that are mounted on the ship's gunwale.

He's also made all the furniture in her, lanterns, leather buckets and "pretty well everything that went down below."

He was first lured into the historial field when he was asked to make a gun carriage for a gun at Canisbrooke Castle on the Isle of Wight.

"It's one of the oldest guns in existence," Matthews said. "It was cast in 1549 and was one of the parish guns issued to every parish before the invasion of the Spanish armada."

He also made the guns for the replica of the Hudson's Bay Company's Nonsuch, which called here and is now in a Winnipeg museum.

All the wood Matthews used for the Golen Hind came from a big elm tree and a large oak from Osbourne House on the Isle of Wight.

"That was Queen Victoria's home and people find it intriguing when they hear Queen Victoria used to walk around under them. The trees were cut a year before the Golden Hind project came up and were nicely aged."

Matthews said San Francisco went ship-crazy when the Golden Hind sailed into the bay.

"There was a solid mass of boats out to meet her, about 3,000 of them," he said. "And when we sailed under the Golden Gate Bridge we looked up and saw a solid line of heads. People just stopped their cars, blocking traffic for miles."

But Matthews' most striking memory of San Francisco was given him by a large power cruiser that came out to greet the Golden Hind.

"This huge gin palace came alongside and I had the biggest surprise of my life when I looked down on her from the poop deck," he chuckled. "There, prowling up and down on her foredeck was a tiger!"

55% SPCA Increase Approved

Esquimalt council's finance committee Monday recommended approval of a 55 per cent grant increase for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals after spokesmen said the service would fold without the full amount.

The expenditure was part of $132,800 approved by the committee Monday night for three organizations.

SPCA spokesman David Beeching requested $16,768 from Esquimalt, a 55 per cent increase over the 1974 grant of $10,800.

Grants being requested from Victoria and Oak Bay include increases of 88 and 49 per cent respectively.

Aldermen recommended approval of the budget after agreeing enforcement of animal control bylaws couldn't be done as cheaply and efficiently by the municipality.

Delegations from the Greater Victoria Library Board and Esquimalt's Royal Canadian Legion branch also appeared before the committee asking for financing.

Committee members approved Esquimalt's $111,000 share of Greater Victoria library costs of $1,400,000 — an increase of 21.2 per cent.

Recommendation will also be made to council that the Legion be given $5,000 to offset tax costs in 1975.

Legion spokesmen Gill Laurenson and Ken Klee told council the Legion is eligible for grant money under the Municipal Act beause it works for the community's general interests and advantage.

He said the group's taxes had gone from about $6,000 to almost $10,000 over the past year, and none of the money raised by members could be used for such costs.

Move to Counter Shift From Coffee

By LESLIE MAITLAND

NEW YORK (NYT) — The idea that a cup of coffee can be a warm, stimulating experience is stimulating fewer people to indulge in it these days. More North Americans, particularly young North Americans, are downing cold drinks, on the run, and when they do want coffee, research has found, they want it instantly and without caffein.

Coffee consumption in the U.S. has dropped to its lowest point in the 24-year period that such records have been kept — 2.25 cups per person per day, down from its peak of 3.12 cups in 1962. And in the industry, now busy planning a promotional campaign, manufacturers are branching into decaffeinated and instant varieties that have increased in popularity, despite the coffee slump.

According to the most recent survey sponsored by the International Coffee Organization, which studied coffee drinking in the United States on a typical winter day last year, the continuous "erosion" in consumption since 1962 reflects a two-fold "problem": "Relatively fewer persons are drinking coffee, and those who do drink that beverage are imbibing somewhat fewer cups per day."

The report concluded that "the first problem appears to be of greater magnitude than the second," and noted that people in every occupational group have contributed to the decline, as have people in all age groups, although "the largest decreases since 1962 have occurred among persons 15-39 years of age."

Most people in the industry say they do not know what has caused the shift away from coffee. Manufacturers speak of changing tastes and of the faster pace of life today when discussing why many Americans are rejecting coffee in favor of cold, convenient drinks.

Only with apparent reluctance do the manufacturers say they realize some abstainers may be motivated by a concern for health — illustrated by the growing interest in natural foods these days.

While recent scientific studies have linked caffein to symptoms of nervous tension, spokesmen for the coffee companies all stress that concern over the effects of caffein on the heart, a different problem has been shown in other studies to be unfounded.

"Anyone who drinks too much coffee is foolish," a statistician at the Pan American Coffee Bureau said. "But then anyone who drinks too much milk is surely foolish too."

The increased consumption of decaffeinated coffee last year (from .23 to .27 cups per person per day), possibly as a result of concern over caffein, is regarded by coffee manufacturers as a guide to planning for the future. In recent years, at least five new brands have been added to the market, and three of these were introduced by companies that were already offering decaffeinated product.

Girl Guides To Get Cords

Certificates of the Canada Cord will be presented to 23 girl guides from the Victoria area in a ceremony Wednesday at Guide House.

Area commissioner Mrs. A. B. Garrison will give out the certificates in this annual presenetation to take place at 5:30 p.m.

Drought Hits Chile

SANTIAGO (Reuter) — Areas of six provinces in Chile have been declared disaster zones because of drought, the official gazette said Monday. The affected provinces are Atacama, Coquimbo, Aconcagua, Valparaiso and Santiago in the north, and Aysen in the south.

Rules of Kinship

DEAR ABBY: With reference to the reason an aunt cannot marry her nephew, but an uncle can marry his niece: It originated in Jewish law.

The principle of consanguinity (close blood relationships) forbids sexual relationships between very near kin. An aunt would be in close blood ties with one's father, therefore a sex relationship would be forbidden according to this logic.

On the other hand, a niece is a step down in the blood lines, and therefore not as close — therefore sex with her would be permitted. This is why a man may not marry his aunt, but he may marry his niece!

Incidentally, while Judaism is a patriarchal society, all blood lines go through the mother. For example, in an intermarriage, the religion of the offspring is determined by the religion of the mother. Therefore, in all blood line relationships, the closeness of the woman determines the decisions.

When I was at the Seminary we used to remember the law through the following joke. It is well-known that often couples quarrel and a man may be moved to strike his wife. If he hit his niece, it is not so bad. But, how would it look if he hit his aunt? — Rabbi Bernard S. Raskus.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for the explanation. Frankly, I don't think it would "look" any better for a man to hit his niece than it would to hit his aunt. And with Women's Lib gaining muscle, a man who hits any female had better look out for himself.

DEAR ABBY: I have waited for too long to write this letter, but I am finally going to get this off my chest.

I am sick of listening to people complain about plumber's rates. No other professional earns his money working in such damp, unsanitary and uncomfortable conditions. A plumber has no set hours. He works from early morning until late at night, and when he finally does get home, his clothes are black, his boots are soaking wet, and he smells like a sewer.

A plumber is called upon to unstop stopped up toilets, dirty, greasy sinks, and he has to crawl under houses where snakes, spiders and rodents lurk.

Why does everyone think that a plumber is overpaid? — Plumber's Wife.

DEAR WIFE: After reading your letter I'm going to give my plumber a bonus next time I see him.

DEAR ABBY: The letter in your column about the woman who prepared so well for her husband's death that she ended up with a lover while her husband continued to live, reminded me of something that happened over 50 years ago. I knew the people involved.

A woman we knew well became very sick. The doctor said she couldn't possibly live, so her husband gave away all her clothes.

Well, she recovered, bought all new clothes and outlived her husband by 20 years. — True Story.

DEAR STORY: There's a common moral in both those stories: "If you don't want it to rain — always carry an umbrella."

Alvarez-Welch Medical Report

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

A number of times in my many years of practice, a man came in much distressed, asking what could be done for his aged mother who insisted on living alone in the big old family home. The son was afraid for fear that his mother might get a stroke that would leave her lying on the floor for several days, unable to call for help. The son wanted to get a housekeeper, nurse or companion for his mother, but she wouldn't have it.

That there is danger for an old person living alone was shown by the mother of one of my patients who, after a big stroke, lay on the floor for five days and nights, too weak to reach her telephone. All that saved her was the fact that the milkman, when he saw that five bottles had not been taken in, broke open the kitchen door, picked her up off the floor, and telephoned her children to come and take her to a hospital.

One friend of mine, an able businessman, has a mother who can barely get around on crutches. She refuses to have a nurse, cook or housekeeper, so he telephones her every morning to make sure that she is able to get up and move about.

Now I read in that fine journal, "Geriatrics," (for September, 1974, page 42) that in the U.S. there are three million older Americans living alone; and risking falls, strokes, or sudden illness.

In some places, such as Ann Arbor, Mich., there is a "telephone reassurance service" such as was founded by Mrs. Grace S. McClure of Saginaw, Michigan.

I read that in Sacramento, Calif., elderly people are given a little device that can be carried in a pocket, and when a button on the device is pressed a signal is flashed in a central office. This could be helpful for these elderly persons who insist on living alone.

I just saw an aged man who has been travelling about the country from clinic to clinic, demanding relief for a number of apparently nervous symptoms that appear to be due purely to the effects of age on the brain or several arteries.

I cannot remember reading any article on the often-difficult problems of (1) saying whether or not all of an old persons distresses are due to age, and (2) what to do to help an old brain.

Today medicines are given to dilate the arteries of an old person's brain, but this is not promising, because in recent years a few experts have shown that after the age of 60, the walls of small brain arteries no longer contain muscle. Obviously, they can hardly contract without any muscle, and if they haven't contracted, they can hardly be relaxed.

One treatment that has been tried is to put a person with an aging brain in a room or tank with oxygen at increased pressure for an hour or so.

PROSTAGLANDIN DRUGS

One of these days, when the U.S. Food and Drug Administration people release for use in America the several hormone-like prostaglandin drugs, millions of people will be interested. Why? Because these drugs have so many remarkable actions.

For instance, if a woman in labor is having trouble expelling her infant, a prostaglandin injection may bring it right out. Or if a person is suffering from arthritis, a prostaglandin may give much relief. It may relieve a high blood pressure, or if a woman wants an abortion, an injection of prostaglandin may quickly accomplsih what she wants.

Many experts around the world are studying these very interesting drugs. They were discovered in 1930, and called protaglandins because they were thought to arise in the prostate gland.

Expansion Key for Arbutus Crafts

CURRY

By HOI-YIN DER
Times Staff

The office of the Arbutus Crafts Association workshop for the handicapped, is not a place one would expect to see the form of a middle-aged woman cramped under her desk in a mountain of papers.

But for Jean Curry the action was a part of basic housekeeping during her second week at the workshop, 4353 West Saanich Road, as the 10-year-old association's new administrator.

"My first reaction when approached with this job was 'no thanks. I'm not interested in moving to B.C.,'" she said after removing herself from under the desk and introducing herself.

But the 41-year-old Saskatchewan native said she changed her mind after reflecting on the challenge of overseeing a workshop for disabled persons.

"It's quite different from my last job with an institute for disturbed and delinquent teen-agers," she said.

The office she inherited is nothing fancy by most management standards — flaking paint, faded furniture, straw baskets and boxes of birthday crackers strewn in front of the wall facing a large desk stacked with papers.

Mrs. Curry explained that she was still in the organizational stage.

But even though she has only been at the job for a short time, she has some very definite ideas about its objectives.

Expansion — that appears to be the key word for the new administrator.

"Arbutus could continue to expand to service the community, just as the community could do so much to aid Arbutus," she said.

In the area of community expansion, Mrs. Curry said a retail outlet, also called Arbutus Crafts, recently opened in the Yates Street Mall.

The shop only stocks items made by disabled person.

"Products can be made in our workships or privately in homes of the disabled . . . we'll accept anything as long as it meets our standards of quality."

Mrs. Curry said another area of community expansion would be to offer more crafts for participation by a greater number of disabled persons.

There are about 80 handicapped persons involved in such crafts as basketry, silk screening, weaving and woodwork.

"We're always in need of volunteers. For instance, we need silk screen designers, instructors, people to drive the disabled to and from the workship . . . anyone who has time to offer us is welcome to come and help," Mrs. Curry said.

She said she would also like to see more commercial contracts offered to the workshop to ease the financial bind the workshop always seems to be in.

"Right now, we've been contracted hy the provincial museum to make decorative leaves. We also do chair caning for those who want their chairs redone."

SHE KEEPS MOUTH SHUT TO SHRINK TO SIZE 10

family

TORONTO (CP) — Hamina Ibrhim, 26, who weighed 222 pounds last summer, is saving $1,000 for a new wardrobe and hopes to outfit herself in size 10 dresses.

But she says she will have to keep her mouth shut to reatch her goal.

Mrs. Ibrhim said she will get her jaws wired shut for a third time to reduce her weight to 100 pounds. She recalls longingly the days of her marriage when she weighed 90 pounds.

"I love spaghetti—oh, man, that was my downfall," said Mrs. Ibrhim, five feet, one inch tall.

Mrs. Ibrhim a former restaurant cook, said she had dieted from time to time since coming to Canada from Egypt in 1970 but every time she got near a plate of spaghetti she fell off the diet.

She finally took action last August. After consultation with he doctor, her dentist wired her rear teeth together so firmly that event the lemon pulp in lemonade could not seep thorugh.

"The next two weeks were torture. I'd smell a steak cooking and wish I was the one sitting down to eat it."

Energy, Economic 'Crises' Were Forecast 25 Years Ago

MOTHER EARTH NEWS

By JOHN SHUTTLEWORTH

It is certainly distressing to note the amount of turmoil and confusion today's "unexpected" energy "crisis" and "unexpected" economic "crisis" have caused. Distressing, because these twin disruptions were not unexpected at all . . . and because (unfortunately) they stand a very good chance of being only the mildest forerunners of much larger troubles to come.

As early as the mid-1940s, a handful of thoughtful men and women could see the handwriting on the wall . . . and began quietly working to prepare us for the "unexpected" energy and economic binds of the 1970s. One of these individuals was Walter Prescott Webb, a professor of history at the University of Texas from 1933 to 1963. And it was a book of Webb's—"The Great Frontier," written in 1950 — that most accurately predicted all the "crises" we now face.

The forecasts made by Walter Prescott Webb a quarter century ago were not based on whim or fancy. They were securely founded on the knowledge that what lies ahead is heavily influenced by the larger forces that have gone before. In short, Webb was able to predict the future with near pinpoint accuracy by first taking a sweeping view of the past. This is not as farfetched or as difficult as it may sound and, once you understand his methods, you should be able to prophesy the future right now just as precisely as Webb did then.

Contrary to what our present politicians and economists would have us believe, the history of Western man (and woman) has not been one long and gloriously smooth curve upward. In fact, as Webb points out in his book, Western Europe was — from about 1300 to 1500 — virtually static.

"Progress" and "growth," the concepts that modern society values so highly, would have absolutely baffled medieval Europe's typical citizen. The Continent's population was static because it had reached a semi-starvation, subsistence balance on the land it inhabited. The people involved lived in a mean, brutish, closed little world from which death — and possibly Heaven — offered the only escape.

And then—suddenly!—within the merest eyeblink of time as the planet measures its age, Europe was buried in an avalanche of riches. In a twinkling, the land available to its people was increased five times over by the "discovery" of North America, South America, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand, and hundreds of islands in oceans hardly known before.

Thanks to the plundering of these new — to them — lands, the amount of gold and silver handled by the inhabitants of Europe was multiplied 15 times over. The grains, fibres, timber, furs, base metals, and other material goods already known to Europeans poured down in a stream hundreds of times larger than they had ever dared hope. And exotic new foods and goods — such as chocolate, rubber, corn, tobacco, and buffalo robes — further surprised and enriched them.

"The boom," as the old saying goes, "was on." And it lasted for approximately 450 years . . . from roughly 1500 to about 1950. Which was, for us, unfortunate. Because 450 years is long enough for the creation of a cultural myth. As a result, most of the inhabitants of the Western world now firmly believe that next year will always be better than this one . . . that our salaries will always go up . . . that we'll always move into classier neighborhoods and drive bigger automobiles.

However, as Webb pointed out 25 years ago, such an "eat, drink, and be merry" way of life is possible only when continually supported by fresh infusions of new and basic wealth. Land, timber, raw materials. Frontier wealth.

And the Great Frontier is now gone. There is virtually no more free land to homestead. No more buffalo herds to slaughter. No more nuggets of gold lying on the ground. The free ride is over.

But that's not necessarily bad. As Professor Webb correctly forcast in 1950, we can make the most of the situation and learn to live completely satisfying lives in the steady-state economy we are now entering. We can, that is, if we'll only realize that the life ahead will bear little resemblance to the "live it up" binge-enjoyed so long by the West.

"We must," said Webb and the others who foresaw today's problems a quarter century ago, "stablize population, cut per-capita consumption of non-replaceable raw materials, and switch from fossil fuels to solar and other renewable sources of energy. Rural, decentralized communities must be designed to take the place of our cancerous cities."

Which is to say that the future must resemble the Medieval age much more than it resembles the Industrial Age we've just passed through.

And it it doesn't? The energy and economic troubles now facing us are only gentle previews of the real disruptions ahead. All the global famines, plagues, political turmoil, wars, and other unpleasantries now being predicted by some environmentalists will surely come to pass . . . because of forces set into motion 450 years ago. Once you understand that, you'll be able to forecast the future just as accurately as Walter Prescott Webb did 25 years ago.

If you'd like more of Professor Webb's predictions and the forecasts now being made by other concerned students of history, send 25 cents and a stamped, self-addressed long envelope to The Mother Earth News, in care of Victoria Times Family Desk, 2621 Douglas. Ask for Reprint No. 219, "How to Predict the Future."

Slant on Desertion

TORONTO (CP) — Marlene Mathers, a social worker, says fathers who desert their families often are ordinary men with problems and not the monsters described by their wives.

"It's really kind of fascinating," Mrs. Mathers said in an interview. "I meet the father and I remember what the mother's story was.

"You really get a slanted view."

Mrs. Mathers, a worker for the Ontario ministry of community and social service's new parental-support program, said the program is helping men previously ignored by social agencies.

The men usually were happy to have someone listen to their side and suggest ways to cope with back-payments of support owed to the province.

New Bill To Probe Chemicals

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons gave approval in principle Monday to a bill that would allow the government to order companies to disclose confidential information about potentially dangerous chemicals and metals.

The proposed environmental contaminants act now goes to the Commons committee on fisheries and forestry.

Easter Plants in Home Keep Well With TLC

By TOM STEVENSON
Washington Post

Easter lilies, gardenias, chrysanthemums and other potted plants will stay attractive much longer in the home if given proper care. The lilies and chrysanthemums can be planted outdoors in the garden when danger of frost is over.

Water the plants when they need it, instead of every day or every two days. Check them every morning or even more frequently. If the soil is dry or nearly dry, water the plant. Water until water comes out at the bottom, wait about 30 minutes for excess water to drain, and empty the saucer. Use room temperature water. Don't water again until the soil begins to dry out.

Plants in cool rooms need less water than those in a warmer, drier atmosphere. As a rule, blooming plants and those with a lot of foilage need to be watered more often than others. Strangely enough, soil often dries more rapidly in winter when the home is artificially heated and humidity is low than in normal summer weather.

Learn to guage the moisture content of the soil by its color and feel. When soil gets too dry, it becomes firm and sometimes cracked.

Never allow plants to go for long in soil that is bone-dry or waterlogged. In either case, roots will be damaged.

Most flowering plants need good light the greater part of the day. Keep them out of direct sunlight. The sun's heat wilts flowers quickly. Changes from a relatively dark spot into very bright light, and vice versa, may damage the plant unless it has a chance to become gradually acclimated to the new situation.

A hot, dry atmosphere does more to shorten blooming life than almost any other factor. Moving the plants to a cooler room at night or lowering the thermostat will help them last much longer.

Plants use carbon dioxide and give off oxygen during the day, and the situation is reversed at night. The amounts involved in these exchanges are so small that special ventilation is seldom required.

According to G. M. Fosler, University of Illinois specialist, there is no scientific basis for removing plants or cut flowers from a sick room at night, as least as far as the patient is concerned; the amount of oxygen that plants take from the air is very small.

When the weather gets warm, the Easter lily can be planted outdoors in a sunny location. Usually it will bloom again in late summer and thereafter, for several years, in June or July.

The gardenia needs very good light, preferably some morning sunlight. Temperatures of 62 to 65 at night and 70 to 75 during the day are best. It has been accustomed to high humidity in the greenhouse from which it came. Humidity can be improved by syringing or misting the foliage two or three times a day with room temperature water. This will help it retain its flower buds and provide more flowers. When the weather gets warm, put it outdoors in light shade.

The potted azalea needs a cool place at night while in bloom. Although the plant holds up quite well in a warm, dry environment, the flowers last only a short time.

Potted tulips, hyacinths, daffodils, crocuses and grap hyacinths should be kept in a cool place, 55 to 60 at night and 70 to 75 during the day. Keep them out of sunlight. Sunlight will hasten flower development but shorten flower life. After the flowers fade, cut them off. When danger of freezing weather is over, take the plants out of their pots and plant them outdoors in the garden.

The potted chrysanthemum sold for Easter should put on a good show for at least two weeks. They need good light during the day, cool temperatures at night (55 to 65) and frequent watering.

After they finish blooming, keep them growing and, when the weather gets warm, divide them anid plant them outdoors in the garden.

These potted chrysanthemums usually are greenhouse varieties and are not suited for outdoor use in areas where frost comes early in the fall, because they do not bloom normally until late October or early November. If frost comes before then, the flowers are ruined.

However, it costs very little to try and they may reward you with some beautiful flowers.

Lilies can be transplanted outdoors

If kept in a cool place at night (50 to 60) the flowers sometimes last a long time.

Bach Program Set By UVic Musicians

Johann Sebastian Bach's Mass in B Minor will be performed by the 250-member University of Victoria chorus and orchestra April 4 and 5.

The composition is considered the greatest and most difficult of its kind for its combinations of chorus, orchestra and solos, according to UVic conductor George Corwin.

The sixth annual Taylor Scholarship Benefit Concert will begin each night at 8 in the university's old gym.

Four soloists to be included in the performance are well-known Victoria artists Karen Smith, soprano; June Dupuis, alto; Robert Hall, tenor; and Brian Benn, bass.

SPEAKER'S TOPIC: INFLATION GOOD

Inflation is good for you up to a point — even when it gets tougher to put food in the pot, an agricultural economist will tell a Victoria luncheon meeting next week.

Dr. Max E. Brunk, professor at Cornell University, is this year's Klinck lecturer for the Agricultural Institute of Canada on a cross-country speaking tour.

He will address Victoria members and their guests at the Strathcona Hotel, noon April 1, on the subject Food Prices and Politics.

Brunk has said mild inflation is healthy because by helping to maintain full employment it contributes to real productivity.

"The expansion that has taken place in the world trade of foodstuffs is a factor perhaps greater than any other in its contribution to both rising food prices and domestic food price instability," Brunk said.

And he thinks many factors have affected food prices, among them personal tastes and Communist wheat purchases. The latter is a manifestation of Soviet and Chinese participation in the world food market as a means of waging economic war, he feels.

Supply and demand under those conditions can have their bases in politics rather than natural availability, needs, wants and ability to pay.

FRESH GROUND BEEF

And Here is the Reason Why

1 All SAFEWAY Ground Beef is Ground From Government Inspected Beef. The Beef is coarse ground at the modern Lucerne Meat Plant in Calgary, then rushed to our stores in controlled refrigerated carriers, where it is re-ground to a fine grind before packing. No other ingredients are mixed with Safeway ground beef at the Lucern Meat Plant, or at store level.

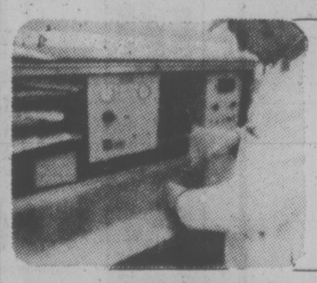
5 Highly qualified Laboratory Technicians are constantly checking bacteria count in our ground beef. This precaution ensures proper hygienic handling at plant level. It also ensures our stores of a top quality product.



3 These rigid control measures regulate temperature, fat content, and cleanliness. All these factors are taken into consideration to guarantee the finest quality ground beef for our customers.

ANOTHER SAFEWAY POLICY
Because we grind our ground beef daily, our customers are assured of a top quality product at all times. The unsold product is frozen at the close of business each day and offered for sale at a lower price the following day.

Heavier Fines Demanded For Drivers Who Drink

VANCOUVER (CP) — A paper prepared for the British Columbia Alcohol and Drug Commission says maximum fines for drinking drivers should be doubled to $2,000 and existing minimum penalties should be removed.

Other recommendations are that B.C. police have portable breathalyser equipment to do immediate tests on all drivers suspected of drinking; that the Criminal Code of Canada provide uniform penalties for all classes of drinking and driving; that enforcement of driving prohibitions be carried out by the Motor Vehicle Branch rather than the courts; and that there be clearly defined insurance penalties imposed by ICBC to be assessed against convicted drinking drivers.

The paper also recommends penalties for overserving, noting that in the past "liquor vendors and servers have not shown much concern about a person leaving a beer parlor or lounge in no shape to drive."

"The attorney-general's department or consumer services might help families take civil action after the death of a family member who was overserved ... there should be no limit on damages recoverable," says the paper.

THE RITES OF SPRING . . .

As part of a spring outdoor multi-events day planned by UVic music department, students of the Shirley Rolland Contemporary Dance Studio will perform with John Smith and the UVic percussion ensemble Wednesday at 11:45 a.m.

The presentation will take the form of a quadrangle in the MacLaurin Building on the campus.

Thomson Demands Report On Contract Row Talks

VANCOUVER (CP) — A provincial mediator could issue a non-settlement report now on the contract dispute between typesetters and Thomson British Columbia Newspapers Ltd. rather than wait until the end of the week, a Thomson spokesman said Monday.

Charles Stewart, who mediated three days of contract talks last week, said he will have to report a non-settlement if neither side changes its position on a reproduction clause.

The company maintains that reproduciton is a form of feather-bedding while the union says it is necessary for job security.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The International Woodworkers of America is feeling an economic pinch because thousands of its members have been laid off, Jack Munro, union regional president, said Monday. The regional office has laid off four organizers and some locals have laid off staff, Munro said.

VANCOUVER (CP) — A dispute over jurisdiction in the herring fishery broke out Monday between the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union and the Pacific Trollers' Association. Shore workers, members of the UFAWU, refused to unload a 56-foot herring packer at two locations on the waterfront saying the UFAWU had declared the cargo hot.

BURNABY (CP) — Council voted Monday not to limit the number of self-serve gasoline stations here, "Let the market place function and provide options some place," said Alderman Vic Stusiak.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mediation talks will resume Wednesday between representatives of British Columbia Hydro and Local 258 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, a union spokesman said Monday.

CHILLIWACK (CP) — Emmanuel Samarez, 40, of Aldergrove was in good condition in hospital today after his light aircraft was demolished in an accident Sunday. Samarez made a forced landing in a field about a quarter of a mile from the Chilliwack airport shortly after take-off.

KAMLOOPS (CP) — The Workers' Compensation Board announced Monday that for the first time it has made a posthumous award for bravery. A plaque has been presented to the family of Jean Swedberg of Merritt who lost her life Sept. 3, 1974, while rousing patrons at the Val Nicola hotel after a fire began.

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — RCMP were awaiting an autopsy report Monday to determine the cause of death of a new-born baby boy whose body was found in a plastic garbage bag Sunday. Police said the body was found by a group of boys playing in the bush.

SILVERDALE (CP) — A total of 140 Grade 1 to 7 students were evacuated safely Monday when fire broke out in a storage area at the Silverdale hall, a few miles west of Mission. Damage is estimated at $10,000.

FINAL PRODUCTION in the Phoenix Festival on the University of Victoria campus is Harold Pinter's The Caretaker. This award-winning "Best Play of the Year" (London 1966), opens Wednesday in the Phoenix Theatre and will continue through March 29 with a matinee at 2 p.m. on the Saturday. Evening performances are at 8 p.m. In this scene the varying moods of the play evolve into broad comedy as Anthony Jenkins, left, and Michael Stephen ponder the problems of a broken-down electrical appliance. Penal System Changes Coming

HALIFAX (CP) — In the next 25 years, the traditional division between prisons and parole will disappear and be replaced by a unified correctional system, says Solicitor-General Warren Allmand.

In a speech on the criminal justice system in the year 2000, Allmand said Monday treatment of prisoners will become highly individualized and large penitentiaries will be replaced by small institutions serving much smaller geographic areas.

The proportion of prisoners granted parole in the year 2000 will likely be the same as in 1975, he told a meeting at St. Mary's University.

"In fact, as the prison population comes to consist increasingly of the hard core of inmates, as less difficult cases are dealt with by alternatives to incarceration, the proportion of paroles granted could even diminish."

The solicitor-general predicted that extension of the minimum wage to prisoners will be accompanied by deductions for room and board, family support and perhaps even union dues.

"This could reduce the cost of the prison system to the taxpayer, while providing the inmate with useful skills that will help him to hold a productive job once his sentence has expired."

In this future correctional system, the reformed prisoner could become increasingly important as a staff member in correctional programs, just as reformed alcoholics and drug addicts are helpful in helping alcoholics and drug addicts reform, he said.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

I do not intend to belittle the abilities of many so-called "average" players when I state that in today's deal our South declarer probably would have fulfilled his contract if an "average" defender was sitting West. However, the fact is that when the deal was played, an expert defender was sitting West, and his finding of the winning defence was "as easy as pie."

Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

♦ K J 9 3
♣ 7 5

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
4♥	Dbl.	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: King of ♣.

West's doube was based (in part) on the appreciation that South had a poorish hand. And it was a reasonable expectation that East would provide a trick for the defence.

On West's opening lead of the club king, East signalled encouragement by playing the nine-spot. The instinctive play at trick two would have been to lead a low club to East's ace, after which East surely would have played back a third club, South ruffing.

Had this line of play been adopted, South would have made his contract. After ruffing the third club lead, he would have led the king of trumps. From here in, all the defenders would have made would have been West's trump ace.

But, after his club king had captured trick one, West shifted to his singleton diamond, dummy's queen winning. A trump was then led, West's ace taking the trick. West now came back with the deuce of clubs to East's ace. East promptly returned a diamond, which West ruffed for the setting trick.

West's defence is easy to understand. He knew, at the completion of trick one, that East had the club ace, for if South had held that card he would not have refused to win the opening lead (with the J-x-x in dummy), since by taking the ace he could make a second club winner out of dummy's jack.

Actually, an expert South would have fulfilled the contract despite West's fine play. After winning West's diamond shift with dummy's queen (at trick two) he would have led the spade king. On it he would have discarded his remaining club as West's ace took the trick. West would now be unable to put East into the lead for the latter to return a diamond — and West would never have gotten around to ruffing a second diamond lead.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

Forecast for Wednesday, March 26

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Stakes are high — don't get involved in complicated schemes. Key is to preserve, consolidate and protect. Legal manipulations may be featured. Consult someone with experience — then do your own evaluation. Be positive that appraisal is legitimate.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Avoid becoming dependent on one who drains from you — financially and emotionally. Be "selfish" about your own health and general well-being. New project would be premature. Wait until loose ends have been accounted and gathered.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Full Moon aspects coincide now with creative endeavors, romatic situation. Dealings with children also could be highlighted. Road is not smooth, but you live and learn. Get to heart of matters. Go directly to source. Leo, Aquarius could be involved.

CANCER (June 21-July22): You may be pulled in two directions. Key is to build toward security. Shortcut won't do the job. Be patient, persistent. Consult individual who aided in past. Put premium on loyalty. Reject flash, superficiality.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Hold off on journeys, if possible. Don't write letters in anger. Ability to laugh at your own foibles is more important than usual. Ideas need revision. Short-range plans don't hold water. You learn lessons of vulnerability. Means you find how far you can go and price you must pay.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): What you want may seem so close but out of your grasp. Details, red tape apparently interfere with attainment of objective. Key is to maintain steady pace once you ascertain direction of goal. Aquarius, Leo, Scorpio persons figure prominetly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23- Oct. 32): Cycle is such that you determine price. Means you get lowdown on what's what and where you have to go. Questions are answered. There is change, variety, travel and relationship which is exciting and has element of danger.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Aura of mystery exists. Clandestine conference is on agenda. Hospital, institution play important backdrop role. Taurus, Libra are in picture. Lifestyle adjustment occurs. You get peek behind the scenes, backstage.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Some friends act in explosive manner. Means be prepared for surprises. Don't take situations, persons for granted. Avoid fooling yourself. Study Scorpio message for valid hint. You may find yourself among theatrical surroundings.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Slow pace is essential to progress. If you insist on excess, you are forced to retrace steps. Accent is on ambition, evaluation. You find it difficult to communicate with one in authority. This condition is but temporary.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You may be reaching back to past. Key is to "let go." Otherwise, you make life difficult for yourself. Aries, Libra persons figure prominently. You now have a choice — forward or backward. A call or message will provide enlightenment.

PISCES (Feb. 19 - March 20): You may request a clean sweep. This comes about because of financial misunderstanding or dispute. Key is to be direct, to go to source and to avoid gossip. Member of opposite sex is very much in picture. Someone wants to reveal information, but is shy, perhaps frightened.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are more aggressive than is apparent on surface. You are able to detect pulse of public. Aries, Libra persons play key roles in your life. October will see you on more solid ground, personally and professionally. Recent domestic adjustment is due to work to your advantage.

REGINA — Lorne Nystrom, 28-year-old member of Parliament for Yorkton-Melville, announced Monday he will seek the federal New Democratic Party leadership. The only other declared candidate is Rosemary Brown, a member of the British Columbia legislature.

OXFORD, England — Two militant campaigners against live animals being used in scientific experiments were each sentenced Monday to three years in jail for acts of arson and causing damage in support of their campaign. Ronald Lee, 23, and Clifford Goodman, 33, admitted 14 charges, including setting fire to boats used for seal culling and burning and damaging property of scientific research establishments.

NEW YORK (CP) — Frank Cotroni and Frank Dasti of Montreal, convicted of being involved in an international drug-smuggling operation, each were sentenced in Brooklyn federal court Monday to two 15-year prison terms on cocaine smuggling charges. The pair are already serving lengthy terms for smuggling heroin into the U.S.

A way for you to save for your dream home and save on income tax too.

This exciting new concept can make getting your own home a whole lot easier. It's a Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan. And here's how it works:
If you're eligible, you can contribute up to $1,000. per year with a lifetime maximum contribution limit of $10,000. Your contributions are deductible from your taxable income. Your savings are guaranteed and earn an attractive rate of interest. When you take the money out and apply it towards the purchase of your home, you pay no tax at all.
And, because at Royal Trust we like to make things easy for you, all you need to start your Plan is $25.00. After that, put away as much as you want, whenever you want. Just like a savings account. The money is available on demand, whenever you want it and it's guaranteed.
If you're interested in this once-in-a-lifetime opportunity from Canada's largest trust company and national real estate company, then we'd be really interested in talking with you.
Give us a call, write, or drop in to see us and find out how easy it is for you to save for a home and save on income tax with a Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan. The deadline for contributions for the 1974 taxation year is March 31, 1975.
Decide what you want. We can help you.

Please send me further information on your Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan without any obligation on my part.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

To all the good C Ber's of Victoria who signed the cards, and gave so generously to the memorial for my husband the "Red Rooster," my humble and heartfelt thanks. He enjoyed C.B. and our little coffee breaks and would have been most proud to be so well remembered. Good numbers to all. — Mother Hen.

ON BEHALF OF ALL MY FAMILY, I would like to thank the staff of Mt. Tolmie Nursing Home for the exceptional love and care they extended to our Mother, Mrs. Povah. We truly appreciate it. And a special thanks to Dr. Stirling for his attentiveness. Mrs. Joyce Little

9 IN MEMORIAM

McAULAY — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Elizabeth Reid, who passed away March 25, 1967.
The dearest mother and noblest friend,
One of the best whom God could lend;
Absent the face we loved so dear,
Silent the voice we loved to hear,
Deep in our hearts her memory is kept,
To love and cherish and never forget.
—Fondly remembered by Margaret and Dad.

WHITTAKER — In loving memory of our dear Mother, Mary Josephine, who passed away March 25, 1973 in Victoria.
In our hearts she is fondly remembered.
Sweet memories cling to her name,
Those who loved her I life sincerely;
Still love her in death just the same.
—Ever remembered by Connie and Cliff, Joan and George.

WHITTAKER — In loving memory of our Grandmother, Mary Josephine, who passed away March 25, 1973 in Victoria.
Nothing can ever take away,
Loving memoires we hold deep in our hearts.
—Always remembered by her Grandchildren.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
—WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

GARDENING

Mastering Celery Culture Critical

Most gardeners would like to grow a good crop of celery and can do so once the culture of these plants is mastered. This is when we recognize the value of a good seed catalogue that gives details of culture for the varieties listed, details not found on the seed packets nor in the average book on gardening.

Germination of celery seed is a problem with most gardeners. It is slow compared with other popular vegetables, and the germinating temperature has a direct bearing on the habit of the plants.

An average of 21 days (3 weeks) is needed for germination during which time the mixture in which the seed is sown must be constantly moist, but never wet. This is assisted by covering the seed container with a sheet of glass. Plastic is not suitable because it allows heat to escape. Any drying of the soil will delay germination.

Temperature must be maintained at 18 degs. C. (65 F.) throughout the germination period. A drop overnight to 13 C. (55 F.) will increase the number of plants that bolt to seed.

Seed should be sown indoors 10 to 12 weeks (70 to 85 days) before the estimated date for weather conditions to be suitable for transplanting to the open garden, which will be from June 1 to 15 locally.

Should cold nights continue after transplanting, a large percentage of seedlings will produce seed stems instead of the desired leaf stalks. Purchased plants that have been dried out in their flats will react the same way.

Celery plants are the gluttons of the vegetable garden, heavy feeders and heavy drinkers, therefore must be carefully placed in relation to adjacent crops.

Onions cannot be planted nearby because of soil water from the celery rows reaching the onion roots in July and delaying ripening; other vegetables to which fertilizer is detrimental also have to be kept at a safe distance.

To retain the required amount of soil moisture at the roots, large amounts of compost or old manure have to be even mixed to a depth of 25 to 30 cms. (10 to 12 ins.) in the bed or rows being prepared for the transplants.

Frequent watering is necessary throughout our normally rainless summers, not over the plants, but directly on the soil over the root area. During the first few weeks after transplanting in June it is important to keep the top 10 cms. (4 ins.) sufficiently damp.

As the roots penetrate more deeply, water must be applied for a longer period on watering day, which will probably be about once a week. Surface sprinkling every day is a useless waste of time and water.

The crop requires 98 to 105 days to maturity, according to variety, and light feeding is needed every two to three weeks.

Feeding may consist of a mild tonic such as liquid whale or alginure (seaweed alginates), both of which can be poured over the plants as well as onto the soil; or two measuring teaspoonsful of 6-8-6 dissolved in a gallon of water, poured on the soil but not on the plants. Stronger fertilizer mixes will need the quantity to the gallon reduced in proportion to the increase in strength.

On feeding day, half the normal amount of water is applied to the soil, then the fertilizer solution, followed by the rest of the water to wash the food down to the feeding roots.

Non-bolting strains of celery are likely to appeal to home gardeners, but these are for early commercial crops grown in cool spring weather, and lack the qualities of the later varieties.

Named selections of the Utah and Salt Lake strains are full flavored and fine textured, usually producing shorter, more compact plants for the home garden that need no blanching. All Golden Celery strains must be blanched.

The tendency to pithy stalks, called "Punking out", has been greatly lessened in the Improved Utah 52-70 selections, a tendency that is aggravated by improper feeding and watering.

Extensively damaged industrial building lies in wake of tornado

Tornado Blasts Atlanta

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Gov. George Busbee spent the night in his roofless mansion following Atlanta's worst tornado of the century.

The governor said he would ask for federal disaster assistance as soon as he has the necessary assessment of damage.

The swirling winds left three persons dead and 118 injured. An estimated 1,000 persons were homeless and numerous businesses were knocked out.

"It looks like saturation bombing," said Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson after a helicopter flight over the stricken areas. "There is devastation in the city you cannot imagine until you see it."

The tornado sliced a path nearly half a mile wide and eight miles long through the northwestern section of the city just before the morning rush hour Monday.

It ripped into a public housing project, a commercial district, more residential sections and then into the $2-million governor's mansion.

Prisoner Saws Way to Freedom

A 32-year-old man being held in Wilkinson Road jail awaiting trial sawed his way to freedom Sunday bringing to four the number of prisoners who have escaped from penal institutions in the Greater Victoria area in the past week.

Ronald Glen Westad was to have appeared in Victoria provincial court today on statutory remand to April 9 when a preliminary hearing is to be held in Duncan on two charges of breaking and entering and theft.

Jail officials said Westad went missing sometime between 10:15 p.m. and shortly before the 11 p.m. lockup count.

Guards discovered two inch-thick steel bars guarding a swing-out window in the day room of the maximum-security west wing had been sawed.

Acting director Hal MacGillivray said there were 10 prisoners in the room at the time watching television at the far end about 40 feet away.

He said guards had checked the prisoners frequently that evening but that it is impossible to set up constant surveillance of every prisoner in the wing.

An internal investigation will be held to determine how the bars, which had been in place since the building was built in 1913, were cut.

Westad and two other men, James Norman McPherson and Larry Matthews, were arrested by RCMP in Duncan Jan. 2 and charged with breaking into the Royal Canadian Legion New Years Day.

He is described as 5'10" tall, 155 lbs., brown hair, blue eyes and wears glasses. MacGillivray called him a quiet person — one who kept to himself most of the time.

The last sawing-out escape at the jail was in 1971 when two prisoners cut through bars on a third-floor cellblock. There was one other such incident in the early 60s.

Meanwhile, police are continuing to search for three men who have escaped from William Head — two, Michael William Morris, 24, and William Harold Mack, 26, who walked away March 18, and one, Daniel Bradley Cain, 19, who fled Saturday evening.

New Roadblocks Urged For Foreign Publishers

OTTAWA (CP) — Book and magazine publishers say they want to make it tougher for foreign competitors to operate in Canada.

In a brief, released Monday, to Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner, the newly-formed Book and Periodical Development Council asked for more stringent ownership requirements before publishing companies are designated as Canadian and said domestic authors should be paid every time their books are borrowed from a library.

The council, composed of associations of writers, publishers, sellers and librarians, outlined a program to help rescue domestic book and periodical publishing from increasing foreign domination.

Neither Time Canada Ltd. nor Reader's Digest Association Canada Ltd. are represented on the council, formed in January.

The council has welcomed Faulkner's announcement of legislation, expected next month, to abolish the right of advertisers in the Canadian editions of Time and Reader's Digest to deduct advertising costs as business expenses but said the definition of Canadian ownership should be more strict.

The government would require domestic publications to be at least 75-per-cent Canadian-owned, free of foreign licensing agreements and as much as 80-per-cent different in content to be judged as Canadian.

The council brief said ownership should be at least 80-per-cent Canadian with a 10-per-cent limit on any single foreign holding. Time Canada is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Time Inc. of New York and Reader's Digest is about 32-per-cent Canadian-owned.

The brief said judgments on domestic ownership should be made by a new book and periodical development agency which would oversee the ownership and control and make recommendations on the operations of the publishing industry.

The council also urged the government to carry out its plans to broaden foreign ownership legislation to restrict foreign purchases or new direct investment in domestic publishing.

Among the other recommendations:

—A public lending-right program should be set up to guarantee domestic authors a royalty on books lent by libraries.

—Federal capital loans should be available to domestic publishers and distributors and libraries should receive federal money to buy Canadian books.

—New controls should be placed on book clubs to restrict foreign ownership and require a greater percentage of domestic titles in books offered to club members.

—Some form of licensing should be established to regulate the foreign-dominated mass paperback and periodical wholesaling business.

—A development fund should be set up with the provinces to help finance greater use of domestically-written and published textbooks.

DAFFODIL SHIPMENTS DOWN 50%

An early Easter and a cold wet spring will result in only about 10 per cent of the daffodil crop being harvested for the eastern market, Saanich grower Geoff Vantreight said Monday.

The Vantreight farm, 4437 Tyndall, Gordon Head, normally supplies 60 per cent of the daffodils to eastern markets for Easter, but weather conditions delayed the crop this year.

"About 10 million blooms are usually picked and shipped for Easter, but we'll be lucky if we can pick a million in time for Easter," he said.

National Defence Gets 'Spy' Branch

OTTAWA (CP) — The communications branch of the National Research Council — the branch accused of spying on foreign delegations in Ottawa — is being transferred to the department of national defence, Science Minister C. M. Drury said Monday night.

Mr. Drury faced questioning from Progressive Conservative Joe Clark (Rocky Mountain) as he tried to zero in on the activities of the security agency in a committee hearing on the ministry of state for science and technology (MOSST).

But most of their questions ran into a blank wall as Mr. Drury refused to answer on grounds that Canada's security is involved. He did admit that transfer of the branch to the defence department had not been announced previously.

—Spending by the communications branch is hidden by being scattered among various other spending estimates for security reasons.

—The agency monitors all radio communications by foreign delegations in Ottawa but does not bug their telephones or other non-broadcast communications.

—No Canadian government agencies engage in spying.

—The precise budget of the communications branch is classified.

Mr. Clark said the transfer of the agency is a "startling revelation" which the government did not see fit to tell the Canadian people.

And he was alarmed at the statement that spending on the communications branch is deliberately dispersed to hide it from MPs.

The statement called into question the veracity of the government's spending documents and interfered with the rights of MPs to supervise the spending of public tax money.

Mr. Clark said the transfer of the communications branch to the defence department is a "major political decision" that he could only conclude was the result of the National Research Council's desire "to get rid of the thing" as an embarrassment to a scientific body.

Mr. Drury said he could neither confirm nor deny Mr. Clark's speculation about the motive for the transfer.

The communications branch was accused last year in a CBC radio program of helping the United States Central Intelligence Agency's espionage effort and the charge was repeated in Maclean's magazine.

French Fraud Gives World Wine Drinkers Bargain Bordeaux

BRUSSELS (UPI) — A new scandal has soured France's wine industry, but the fraud may have been a blessing in disguise for the world's wine drinkers.

The common market has discovered an intricate fraud involving France's Bordeaux region, the second scandal affecting the famed wine-growing area in a year.

Common Market officials said Monday wine dealers have been putting cheap labels on expensive Bordeaux vintages in complicated manoeuver aimed at getting subsidies from the economic community.

The scandal follows the conviction last year of a group of prominent Bordeaux wine dealers for doctoring their product and putting cheap wine in expensive bottles.

Common Market officials said the West German government is investigating the latest fraud involving France's troubled wine industry.

The officials said high-quality Bordeaux wine is being shipped to West Germany, relabelled ordinary table wine and then exported around the world under the new labels.

Ordinarily such an operation wouldn't make sense. But these aren't ordinary times. There's a huge wine surplus now with more than a billion unsold bottles in Europe.

Much of the surplus is high-quality Bordeaux. Shippers blame the glut on last year's labelling scandal as well as overproduction.

The Common Market officials said a few ingenious but not particularly law-abiding — wine merchants came up with a novel way of dealing with the problem.

They labelled their high-quality Bordeaux vintages as cheap wine, qualifying for a special 10 per cent Common Market export subsidy. High-quality wine doesn't get subsidized.

FAISAL . . . slain by nephew

Faisal Assassination Spurs Fears of New Oil Crisis

Times News Services

King Faisal of Saudi Arabia, the most moderate of Arab leaders and one of the world's most powerful monarchs, was assassinated today by a demented nephew in the midst of a Moslem religious ceremony in Riyadh.

His death threatened the Middle East and the world with a new crisis that could have unforseen effects on future oil prices.

Faisal was succeeded to the throne by his younger brother, Crown Prince Khalid, 62, who had served as first deputy prime minister.

The slaying had instant world-wide repercussions. Oil prices on the London stock market plunged as much as 24 cents, representing fears that the delicate state of Arab relations with the west could be impaired.

In New York, the jittery stock market plunged sharply at today's opening but then began to recover.

Analysts on Wall Street said Faisal's death added to the anxiety of investors over the failure of U.S. Secretary-of-State Henry Kissinger's Middle East peace mission, a major factor in sending prices plunging Monday.

Although instrumental in the 1973 Arab oil embargo, Faisal was considered by U.S. businessmen to be pro-American and an admirer of the free enterprise system.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries cancelled today's Vienna meeting of experts on oil prices because of the death.

Some oil sources said his assassination could plunge OPEC into a severe crisis.

The experts were to discuss how to sever the traditional oil-dollar link to preserve their oil revenues from the decline in the value of U.S. dollar.

France expressed concern that the murder may dangerously increase tensions in the Middle East. The over-riding fear in the West is that the staunchly anti-Russian Faisal could be succeeded by a left-leaning regime.

Israel, faced with a breakdown of the Kissinger negotiations with Egypt, also reacted swiftly. An official source called the murder a reminder of the instability of Arab regimes and warned that if a leftist regime took over in Saudi Arabia there could be dangerous shifts in the balance of power in the Middle East.

A radio announcement in Riyadh said the nephew, Faisal bin Musaed shot the 69-year-old king several times after approaching him to offer salutations on the occasion of the Prophet Mohammed's birthday, being celebrated today throughout the Moslem world.

There was no immediate word on the fate of the nephew.

"When he got near the king, he fired several shots at His Majesty," the announcement said. The radio called the assassination "an individual one." It said the prince was "mentally unsound, had acted on this own and was not driven by anyone."

Peace Force Pullout?

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Defence Minister James Richardson told the Commons Monday that Canada's peace keeping forces in the Middle East would have to evacuate and leave the area of hostilities if a shooting war breaks out there.

He explained that they have sidearms and are not equipped to defend themselves against an invading army.

The question was raised in the house because of the dangerous situation developing between Israeli and the Arab nations with the breakdown of U.S. Henry Kissinger's failure to secure an agreement for peace between Israel and Egypt.

Egypt has called on the Arab world to mobilize against Israel. Israel has vowed to stand alone against threats and pressures.

In Cairo, Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmi asked the 20-nation Arab League Monday night to strangle Israel economically and politically.

He blamed Israel for the collapse of Kissinger's recent peace mission and accused the Jewish state of "playing with words" instead of negotiating.

B.C. Professionals Hinting at Strike

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

The word "strike" is now being whispered in hushed tones among the professional employees in the provincial government.

It's an unusual word for professionals to use and most of the talk is still aimed at avoiding strike action or any other kind of on-the-job confrontation. Nevertheless the Times has learned that militant feelings have been aroused among the 1,100 engineers, dentists and other professionals who form the B.C. Government Professional Employees' Association. (BCGPEA)

And in meetings around the province last week, the professionals made it clear to the BCGPEA executive they are willing to adopt a much harder line — assume an adversary role — to fight the government.

Negotiations with the government for the BCGPEA's first master contract have bogged down after eight months of talks and the professional civil servants are frustrated, disillusioned and more than a little angry.

They charge the government has not bargained in good faith and is now attempting to destroy the union.

The situation is rife with ironies and contradictions.

The NDP, with an ideological commitment to collective bargaining for civil servants, imposed unionization on hesitant group of professionals who had had little or no previous association with unions.

The professionals dutifully if reluctantly formed their association last year but stressed that their aim was to establish a harmonious, non-adversary relationship with the government. They decided they should forego the right to strike and pledge their first loyalty to their employer and their professional code rather than to their own association.

But now the BCGPEA leaders believe the tables have turned.

It's the government which no longer wants the professionals to exist as a union and the professionals who are anxious to retain their rights as an association.

There are many steps the association can take to exert pressure on the government, according to the BCGPEA executive, and full strike action is at the bottom of a list of some 20 options.

Many associations members are still firmly opposed to any strike action by professionals but executive spokesmen indicated a "surprising measure of militancy" was evident at the recent meetings.

Some members of the BCGPEA blame the failure of negotiations on the government's inability to conceive of harmonious, non-adversary labor relations. With deep roots in the trade union movement, they say, the NDP is not willing to accept the professional approach of the BCGPEA.

Other association members charge that certain deputy ministers have persuaded the government that unionization of professional-management people will threaten the established lines of authority

Police Seize Diamonds

REGINA (CP) — A large number of diamonds valued between $500,000 and $1 million were seized during a search of 24 city homes in part of a country-wide raid, police said Monday.

An RCMP spokesman said it was believed an international diamond smuggling ring based in Regina may have been uncovered in the raid which followed an investigation conducted during the last few months.

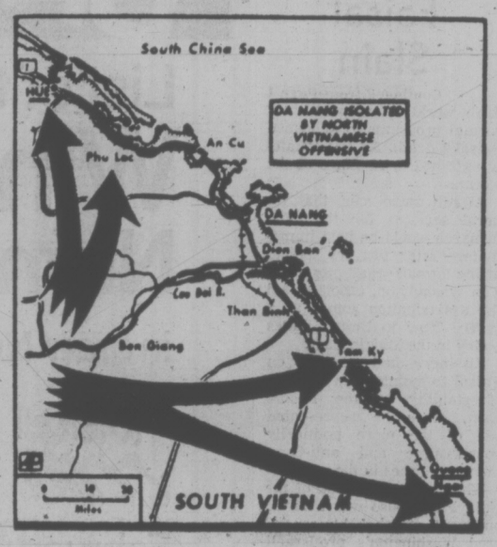
The spokesman said the exact value of the gems will not be known until they can be examined by a gemologist.

The incident began about 9 a.m. when RCMP approached a home in a Regina suburb to serve a warrant under the Customs Act. They were met with a shot fired from within the building.

City police were called to aid the RCMP and entry to the building was gained after Morris Schumiatcher, a city lawyer, talked a man, whose name was not released, into surrendering.

There were no injuries. The RCMP spokesman said similar searches were conducted in other Canadian and U.S. centres.

Charges are pending and until they are laid later this week in provincial court, the names of individuals involved will not be released, he added.



SEINER DOWN

The 12th fish boat to be lost or capsized since the herring season started eight days ago was spotted overturned in Hecate Strait this morning.

The 56-foot aluminium seiner was spotted 20 miles northeast of Cumshewa Inlet, which is south of Sandspit on Moresby Island.

It cannot be confirmed but it is believed the seiner carried a five-man crew.

Two Trans Pacific airline planes were despatched to the scene from Sandspit. Also searching the area were three aircraft from CFB Comox.

Talks to Resume In CUPE Dispute

Bargaining will resume at 10 a.m. Wednesday as the first action in two weeks to attempt to settle Greater Victoria's nine-week-old civic services dispute.

Sessions at the Empress Hotel, arranged by provincial mediator Clark Gilmour, are the only settlement path in view of civic employers' refusal to accept a voluntary industrial inquiry and Labor Minister Bill King's reluctance to intervene.

King said Monday he will not use his authority to impose third party intervention in the dispute, which involves some 1,800 school and municipal employees belonging to Canadian Union of Public Employees.

A source close to regional employers said there are no new proposals to put forward at Wednesday's meeting but stand-in negotiator George Wilkinson has been instructed by the employers to explore whatever avenues he can to get back to meaningful negotiations.

CUPE's area bargaining committee turned down the last offer made by the employer group, which was to raise wages by about 24 per cent over two years, with a cost of living adjustment next year.

The union proposal rejected by employers in previous exchanges would have raised wages by a composite 45.61 per cent on payroll in the core municipalities, although CUPE contended the average would have been closer to 31 per cent.

CUPE supports the idea of fulltime negotiation until a settlement is reached, but the employer group refuses to engage in unbroken talks while there is an obvious stand-off in attitudes.

The only abnormal picket action today was by CUPE Local 388. City of Victoria inside workers, who Monday began picketing a James Bay construction site, the $5 million Bay Village project being built by Farmer Construction Ltd., alleging that strike breaking inspectors are being used.

The firm denies the charge and is seeking a Labor Relations Board order to remove pickets which have brought the undertaking to a halt.

BEAVER SYMBOL OFFICIAL

The small, broad-tailed rodent was recognized in a private bill introduced in the Commons by Sean O'Sullivan (PC — Hamilton Wentworth).

U.S. Airlift Planned For Da Nang Refugees

Times News Services

The U.S., using contracted commercial airliners, Thursday will begin an airlift of 10,000 refugees a day from Da Nang, Western diplomats said today.

Da Nang, South Vietnam's second-largest city about 350 miles north of Saigon, has become vulnerable to attack since the North Vietnamese over-ran two provincial capitals to the south and the Saigon government abandoned Hue 50 miles to the north.

Western diplomats said the retreating troops boarded boats under fire at the nearby port of Tan My for the trip down the coast of the South China Sea to Da Nang.

The pullout from Hue, the third largest city and spiritual centre of South Vietnam, left the Communists in control of 11 of the country's 44 provinces, 50 per cent of its 66,000 square miles.

There was no indication how long it would take for the 20,000 retreating troops to leave Hue, a walled city of stately streets, Buddhist shrines and ancient artifacts.

More than 1,000 U.S. marines were killed or wounded during the 1968 Tet offensive in 26 days of fierce fighting for Hue, 400 miles north of Saigon.

In Saigon, unsubstantiated rumors of possible coup attempts by enraged generals and colonels were numerous, and President Nguyen Van Thieu officially replaced the military governor of the capital with a general thought to be more loyal to him.

"The mood is very ugly," said a highly-placed Vietnamese military source. "Colonels are saying that Thieu should be assassinated and the generals are furious. It's like playing with fire around spilled gasoline. One of the matches is going to ignite it."

57% FOR PACT

OTTAWA (CP) — With about 50 per cent of the vote in, federal blue collar workers have been voting by a 57-per-cent margin in favor of a tentative contract settlement, a Public Service Alliance spokesman said today.

But the result so far on contract proposals that would provide pay raises of 29.25 per cent over 26 months is worrying alliance leaders who fear the agreement could be rejected by workers belonging to the 18,600-member group. Average hourly wage for the workers now is $4.42.

Early returns from some of the more vocal locals had indicated rejection of the settlement but as results from more moderate came in, the situation changed.

Should the tentative agreement be rejected, there could be a renewal of the selective walkouts which have disrupted grain shipments, air and postal services for the last month. Parliamentary action would be likely in that event.

The alliance spokesman said union officials expect a strong vote for rejection from the Atlantic provinces, where pay rates are lower than in other parts of the country.

NEWS BRIEFS

Leftist Cabinet

LISBON (UPI) — Premier Vasco Goncalves today announced the creation of a new revolutionary cabinet packed with Communists and their allies in key ministerial posts. Socialist leader Mario Soares was ousted as foreign minister, despite his objections, but remained in the government without portfolio.

B.C. Oil Imports

OTTAWA (CP) — The B.C. Energy Commission estimates the province will have to import about 280,000 barrels of oil a day — about 90 per cent of its needs — by 1994.

The commission notes in a brief to the National Energy Board released Monday that B.C. oil fields currently meet only about 25 per cent of the province's demands. Five years ago they supplied 50 per cent.

U.S. Bank Fails

HOUSTON (AP) — The Franklin Bank was closed Monday because of "adverse economic conditions" and losses incurred by its loans. The failure was the fifth in the U.S. in the last two years. The bank, which opened in 1965, had deposits of slightly more than $18 million last Dec. 31, officials said.

READERS' BONUS IN FOOD SECTION

Food and nutrition loom large in the minds of all homemakers these days, so it's no wonder that the Food and Nutrition section in the Victoria Times every Wednesday has been so popular with readers.

Now Victoria Times readers are getting a bonus. The Food and Nutrition section has been expanded and will appear both Wednesdays and Thursdays.

And a new personality has been added to the list of top-notch writers who appear in the section regularly.

He is "Tiny" Bennett, well-known Canadian professional outdoors writer who has also been cooking for 40 years — and writing about cooking for 18 years.

"Tiny" — he's six-foot-six — believes firmly that the role of a writer on food and cooking is to bring to readers quality home cooking based upon reasonable costs, and he has created a new look in cooking columns where costs to the family are carefully presented for all the meals covered.

Dockers Ordered Back to Work

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Parliament Monday night ordered B.C.'s 4,000 striking longshoremen to return to work today.

The Commons and Senate gave quick passage to legislation introduced Monday afternoon by Labor Minister John Munro, forcing the men to return to their jobs under the terms of their old contract which expired Dec. 31.

The West Coast Port Operations Act, 1975, as it is called, authorizes the binding arbitration of the dispute which has kept West Coast docks idle since March 1.

Don Garcia, a spokesman for the International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union in Vancouver, said toady he presumes the longshoremen will be back on the job later today.

Garcia said he presumes — and he emphasized presumes — the men will report for work on the docks at 5 p.m. today under the former collective agreement.

Meanwhile, members of the longshoremen's union are meeting to consider the back-to-work legislation.

Alex Cregan, president of the British Columbia Maritime Employers Association, said it will be Wednesday at the earliest before operations can resume.

Even if the longshoremen return it will take 24 hours to gear up for a resumption of operations on the waterfront.

He also said the employers have not yet received official notice from Ottawa that the legislation has been passed.

Under the terms of the legislation, the old contract between the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union and the B.C. Maritime Employers' Association is extended to Dec. 31, 1976, or until a new contract is worked out by arbitration, whichever is earlier.

The legislation also orders ship and dock foremen who walked off the job Sunday, to return to work while their first contract is being settled the same way.

The Commons rejected an attempt by New Democratic Party MPs to give the longshoremen the first half of the wage settlement agreed to by negotiators but rejected by the union membership Saturday.

That settlement, worked out by the two parties with the help of Assistant Deputy Labor Minister William Kelly, would have given the men a raise of $1.95 an hour — $1.15 in 1976 and 80 cents in 1976.

Gov't Office Space Wasted—Bennett

Office space leased by the government in Prince George last August has remained vacant for more than seven months, Opposition leader Bill Bennett charged Monday.

The 4,900 square feet of space is costing the province $32,851 a year, said Bennett, but the government still has not moved in and has not taken steps to renovate the office space.

The Socred leader raised the issue in the legislature and Public Works Minister Bill Hartley said he would check into it.

The principle at stake is what policy the government follows to anticipate its space needs, and he asked Hartley to explain the policy.

Hartley said space is not acquired until it is absolutely necessary but after space is leased the department has to design the facilities to meet specific needs of each department.

But Levi Johnson, manager of the Oxford Building in Prince George, said later in an interview the government signed a lease for the third floor of the building Aug. 1, 1974, and has not presented any plans for renovating the space.

The building is new, with just the barest finishing and each tenant has to design the interior to his liking.

He confirmed the cost of renting the space is $6.50 a square foot per year and said he has heard of no explanation why the government has not moved in.

The government is already occupying space on the fifth floor of the building, but the third floor space was to be used for housing and parks branch space.

In answering the question in the legislature, Hartley said he would advise the house of government policy on rental accommodation but he also called on Bennett to table his information on the Prince George situation.

MAIL OFFER 'RISKY'

A mail order offer by an Ontario firm on electronic mini calculators at cut rate prices may not be such a good deal after all, Bill Tindall, manager of the Victoria Better Business Bureau, has warned.

The offer, contained in a circular mailed to residents in Victoria from Eastern Freight Distributors of Downsview, announces a liquidation sale of 1,411 calculators at $38.50 each, slashed from the $99.50 list price.

The notice says the calculators have been held in bonded warehouse while creditors claims are settled.

Tindall said the company gives a one-year free replacement guarantee if the calculator malfunctions but added the guarantee might be worthless.

"Generally, any guarantee is a manufacturer's one and yet in as much as it is a liquidation sale that would imply the manufacturer has gone out of business."

He said the company is not registered with the Business Registry office in Toronto and that 16 complaints about the company in Ontario have gone unanswered.

Since the circular showed up here there have been several inquiries to the BBB, Tindall said.

"It's a pretty hairy type of offer. Of course it is an attractive price but in view of the complaints we feel it might be fairly risky proposition."

Saanich Seeking Vandalism Report

Trustees are concerned that district maintenance workers are having to spend too much time and material repairing damage done to schools by vandals.

The monthly reports will include information on whether the vandalism seems to occur most often at certain times or in certain parts of the school district.

Most serious vandalism in the past year in the district was the fire set in the library of North Saanich middle school last May 25 by two teenagers, which did $150,000 damage.

In other business the board:

—Approved sketch plans for an addition to Clarmont senior secondary school, including a new foods room and a metal shop, and ordered working drawings prepared.

—Received a notice of the retirement of district accountant Muriel Knott, who will end her 18-year-career with the school district Aug. 31.

—Set a tentative date of April 9 for a meeting with Brentwood elementary school parents, who are concerned that proposed reorganization of schools in the southern half of the district may result in some Brentwood children having to attend other schools.

CUPE Bargaining to Resume

King said in the legislature Monday he has power to impose an industrial commission to settle the strike-lockout, but pointed out that unless both sides co-operate a commission would be meaningless.

A B.C. Supreme Court hearing opened today on an application by Greater Victoria School District for an order to restrain picketing at the larger schools, which lawyer John Wood described as "grossly excessive and unlawful," and "intimidatory of teachers and students."

Mass picketing involving from 15 to 70 striking janitors and maintenance workers at seven secondary schools between March 11 and 18 was "excessive in persuasion" and caused some children to skip classes, Wood said.

The board wants an injunction limiting pickets to three per school entry or driveway.

Ian Stewart, representing Local 382 school employees, said "the whole body of law regarding conspiracy, watching and besetting have been set aside by the Labor Code."

He said this had the effect of excluding the board from acting, but Wood argued the court has jurisdiction because of a decision of the Labor Relations Board last December in which it was said LRB had no jurisdiction over unlawful picketing.

military situation and the need for assistance in South Vietnam, the chief White House spokesman announced today.

Weyand once was U.S. military commander in South Vietnam.

The Pentagon meanwhile announced a 300-man marine helicopter squadron is preparing to head for the Far East, possibly to assist in evacuation of Americans from Cambodia or Vietnam.

The squadron has been alerted to go on the Hancock which will leave Pearl Harbor "some time this week for a possible move to Westpac (the Western Pacific) ... we are not able to tell you exactly where they are going and I would not make any assumptions," a Pentagon spokesman said.

The helicopter carrier Okinawa and accompanying ships with about 1,500 marines and 30 helicopters have been in the Gulf of Thailand off Cambodia for the past few weeks in case they are needed to evacuate Americans from Phnom Penh.

Two thousand men of the South Vietnamese 1st Infantry Division arrived by boat in Da Nang today where they were rumored to be forming a new defence line.

Fear gripped the isolated city where U.S. combat troops first entered the Vietnam War in March, 1965. The city was tense and jammed, its population of 500,000 more than doubled by refugees.

Panicky civilians swamped the Air Vietnam terminal, trying to get out of the city. Some soldiers deserted and joined their families on overloaded boats for Saigon.

Meanwhile in Cambodia, 20 Khmer Rouge rockets hit Phnom Penh airport Monday night and today, but there was no interruption in the U.S. airlift of rice, ammunition and petroleum products to the Cambodian capital.

The rockets landed just outside the U.S. embassy forcing Ambassador John Gunther Dean to leave his office and take over in a ground floor shelter.

The airlift resumed shortly before noon Monday after a two-day suspension ordered when two of the planes were damaged by shelling. U.S. officials said there were 23 flights on Monday, instead of the usual 40 to 45.

$3,000 Damage In Fire

An estimated $3,000 damage was done when fire broke out in the rear of a single-storey home at 1110 MacKenzie over the noon hour Wednesday.

Occupants Mrs. Vera Watkiss and her son were away at the time.

Turks Fire on Jet

ANKARA (UPI) — Turkish anti-aircraft' gunners today fired on a Greek air force jet that violated Turkish airspace in the first shooting incident since last summer's Cyprus war, a foreign office spokesman said.

Faisal Slain

Arab world interrupted their normal programs to announce Faisal's death. All immediately switched to readings of the Koran.

Riyadh radio said that funeral services for the slain monarch would be held immediately after prayers tonight at the Riyadh grand mosque.

In Washington, officials said the assassination comes as a severe blow to United States policy in the Middle East.

Kissinger had counted on Faisal to maintain an element of stability in the Middle East, since he represented one of the more politically conservative and anti-Communist regimes in the region.

While a strong friend of the U.S., Faisal also was a bitter opponent of what he considered Washington's pro-Israeli stance and had spearheaded the oil embargo by the Organization of petroleum Exporting Countries against Israel's friends during the Arab-Israeli war of October, 1973.

Saudi Arabia accounts for the largest amount of oil purchased from the Middle East by the U.S., nine per cent of U.S. imports.

Faisal became king Nov. 1, 1964, ruling as one of the few absolute monarchs left in the world. His father, King Ibn Saud, had turned over powers in 1953 to his son Saud who squandered billions on living until the family convinced him to turn over rule to his stronger brother Faisal.

King Ibn Saud founded the kingdom of Saudi Arabia in 1932, the culmination of a 30-year attempt to re-establish the power his ancestors wielded in the 18th and 19th centuries. Ibn Saud granted oil concessions in the 1930s to what later became the Arabian-American Oil Company, more familiarly known as Aramco.

Trade Lost, Says Human 'Light Bulb'

A 34-year-old Victoria construction worker, Slavko Brajkovic, will never be able to work again at his trade because of injuries suffered in a 1973 industrial accident, B.C. Supreme Court was told Monday.

He was injured while working at a construction site at Craigflower Road and Carrie June 2, 1973, after the main line of a crane came into contract with high-voltage power lines, said his lawyer, Dr J J. Gow.

Brajkovic is alleging negligence and claiming damages from Capital Builders, framing contractor at the site and owner of the crane, and crane operator Richard Kruysifix. D. H. Gray is representing Capital Builders and Edward Pollard is representing Kruysifix.

Brajkovic, now unemployed, said he took hold of both 25-foot slings where concrete blocks and barrels of mortar were being placed on pallets to be lifted on to the apartment building where his company, Slavko Masonry, was building a fire wall.

"I made two steps. I felt like a light bulb. All my body was shaking from the electricity," he told Mr. Justice J. G. Gould.

He tried to pull away from the slings, couldn't, and became unconscious. Later, when he woke up, he had "tremendous pains" in his hands and legs.

Plastic surgeon Dr. Urban Gareau said Brajkovic suffered second and third degree burns to both hands, the right outer thigh and the right leg below the knee. Most of the burns were third degree where anything from the skin below is killed by the burn.

The right leg had to be amputated below the knee and the hands remain "badly contracted and fixed. The fingers cannot be straightened."

"This is a major injury, one from which many would not survive initially," he said

"It's very close to a useless pair of hands he has."

Dr. James Warren, an orthopedic surgeon, told court Brajkovic "could not carry on masonry or similar work, nor will he ever be."

Asked if this will be for all time, he replied "I would say so."

Both doctors agreed that light work such as supervising others could be done by Brajkovic, without manual labor.

Dr. Gow said Slavko Masonry was engaged to do the furnace chimney, fire wall and garbage chute work by Stanrick Developments Ltd. Capital Builders, the framing company, supplied a 14-ton mobile crane operated by Kruysifix to lift the fire wall materials to the third floor.

Brajkovic, he said, "took the full shock of the current."

Brajkovic told the court his only income at present is a provincial disability pension of $233.34 a month. He said he didn't get workers compensation because he wasn't an employee but owned the masonry firm.

TOWN TALK

We thought we were on to a good story this past month and phoned all over — from Alaska to Ottawa — checking it out.

We were tipped an FBI agent had lived at 3180 Stevenson Place in 1971.

Intriguing, in view of this country's touchiness about such American intrusions.

The FBI and RCMP said they knew nothing, but with the help of some business people we finally got the name of a man who lived in the house about the time the rumor put him there — November and December, 1971.

We phoned Joe Marion, FBI liaison man for Canada in Ottawa, and told him we had this name — John William Whaley — and asked him to look into it.

Joe, quick to please, phoned back the next day.

Yes, indeed, Whaley was a special agent working out of the Los Angeles FBI office and yes, he'd rented the house in Saanich.

But no, he said, there was nothing clandestine about the deal . . . he'd rented it for his son, also named John William, then age 18, who was attending the University of Victoria!

A long-time member and trustee of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club walked into the Ripon Road clubhouse Monday for the first time in his life.

He's Clifford Matthews and the reason it's taken so long is because he belongs to the Royal Victoria Yacht Club on the Isle of Wight.

Matthews hopes to meet his Canadian counterparts while in Victoria and even has some slides taken on a cruise to the Hebrides to help cement Anglo-Canadian relations. He will show these and others of the Golden Hind replica Thursday at 8 p.m. in the clubhouse.

Members of the Turkey Head Sailing Association and the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, have been invited.

Kal Kaleem of 1720 Denman and Jim McAvoy of 107 Crease were section winners and tied for third over-all.

SMALL . . . no charge

Next attraction presented by Victoria Chamber of Commerce will be a speech April 9 by Joe Connell of Kitchener-Waterloo, a professional motivator.

It's not too clear what a professional motivator does, but it is known that this one charges $800 an hour to do it.

What motivated the chamber to present Connell at a public meeting is that someone else is picking up the tab, says chamber manager Brian Small. Connell is coming to motivate the Canadian Association of Broadcasters the same day in Victoria and that organization is sponsoring Connell's appearance at the chamber meeting.

Chartered accountant Kenneth MacKay had luch with his former high school principal, Jack Wallace, recently and was told by Wallace, "You're not supposed to be here, you're dead!"

MacKay is a graduate of the University of British Columbia and Wallace had seen his obituary in the UBC Alumni Chronicle. This month's edition of the Chronicle carried an apology. They had mistaken MacKay for another graduate with the same initials and surname.

MacKay would never have known of the mistake but for Wallace.

"They didn't send me a copy," he said, "I guess they saw no point in sending me one, seeing I wasn't around."

It's called "Making Human Resources Productive."

There has been a changing of the guard at Wilkinson Road jail

Director H. A. L. Hamblin has been promoted to the Superior Street corrections headquarters whee he is in chage of construction and maintenance of all jails and camps in the province.

Hamblin's deputy, Hal MacGillivray has been appointed acting diector. MacGillivray is responsible for the operation of all three jail facilities on the Island — the one at Snowden, near Campbell River, the one at Jordan River, opened last month, and Wilkinson Road.

No, it wasn't just the motorists who were affected last week when police hustled CUPE pickets off the Johnson Street Bridge and the bridge was left raised for marine traffic.

Three old winos had just wandered over to the Vic West side to consume a bottle of the Okanagan's best — well, worst if you insist — when they found the bridge being lifted.

Looking back somewhat wistfully, they realized it was going to mean an awful long trudge back to the Government Street liquor store for a refill . . .

Budget Crunch Pressuring Region Heads

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Senior staff at the Capital regional district office were scurrying today through last-minute preparation of a $7.5 million budget bylaw which has to be passed Wednesday by the regional board.

The Municipal Act requires regional districts to adopt their annual budgets by the end of March and Wednesday's meeting will be the last before the deadline.

A two-month strike-lockout of civic employees has left the burden of budget preparation on the shoulders of a handful of senior personnel.

Dennis Young, the board's executive director, said today that if the board missed the deadline with its budget bylaw, any spending covered by it could be challenged by anyone and might be declared invalid.

The budget bylaw really covers 24 individual budgets for a variety of programs in the region, most of which do not effect all residents.

The $7.5 million total is deceptive because it includes a number of items for which the region will receive a counterbalancing subsidy, said Young.

For example, $2.6 million is earmarked for community health services but the provincial government will provide 70 per cent of this.

And there will be close to $1 million in the budget to cover financing the region has arranged with the Municipal Finance Authority. But the regional district simply acts as agent for five local municipalities in arranging the long-term loans and repayment will come from those municipalities.

Parks and planning budgets are ones which affect most regional residents but there are many smaller budgets covering isolated projects. The Juan de Fuca recreation complex is one example, where the park gets tax support from two electoral areas only, the swimming pool from three and the arena from two, Young said.

Heart Team Rolling

The open heart surgery unit at Royal Jubilee Hospital is now doing four and sometimes five operations a week but there can still be a wait of up to three months for patients.

Two operations were done Monday to bring the total performed since the unit opened in July of 1973 to 262.

Mortality rate from the sophisticated surgery is running between 2 and 3 per cent, which is a "very, very good" record, Dr. A. C. Pickles, Jubilee's executive director, said today.

The unit, only one of its kind on Vancouver Island, uses a heart-lung machine so the surgical team (about 10 doctors, technicians and nurses) can work on a patient's heart at rest.

Most common operation is the so-called bypass, in which tiny sections of vein taken from a patient's leg are grafted around blocked arteries on the patient's heart. The unit also repairs and replaces faulty heart valves.

Pickles said there are plans to do six open heart operations a week "but we're not there yet." Providing staff and facilities for the intensive post-operative care required is causing the delay.

Gov't Wage-Price Controls Proposed by Local Teachers

Government controls over wages, prices, profits, dividends, interest and rents will be proposed by Greater Victoria delegates to the B.C. Teachers' Federation annual meeting in Vancouver next week.

The Greater Victoria Teachers' Association will propose that the BCTF support wage and price controls and urge the provincial government to co-operate with the federal government in implementing the controls.

The resolution is one of 27 by local teachers' associations which will be voted on by the 700 delegates at the meeting.

It was proposed to the GVTA by teachers from Oak Bay senior secondary school and passed by a narrow margin, GVTA president Mavis De Girolamo said today.

"By condoning inflation we support stealing from those who through their working lives saved for their retirement, including our former colleagues," Oak Bay teacher Dave Reimer said in a supporting statement to the resolution.

We live in a time when genuine world shortages are beginning to appear, Reimer said, so we cannot rely on continual growth and expansion to solve our economic problems.

He said we must accept that at some point the economic pie won't get any bigger, so we will have to work out a fairer method of dividing that pie.

"This (government controls) is surely the only fair and sensible procedure to settle wage and salary disputes for all groups," he said.

"However, we cannot expect labor unions to agree to this procedure as long as manufacturers and or entrepreneurs are allowed to charge all the traffic will bear."

Oak Bay senior teachers proposed a second resolution which was also approved by the GVTA membership, and will be discussed at next week's annual meeting.

The resolution is that the BCTF support the continuation of annual government scholarships for high school students.

BCTF policy currently opposes the scholarships.

The GVTA will have 15 delegates and three geographical representatives at the annual meeting, the largest delegation outside of the Lower Mainland.

A resolution from the South Vancouver Island District Council, representing teachers south of Nanaimo except for Greater Victoria, proposes an amendment to the Public Schools Act to allow teachers to run for school board seats.

Besides the resolutions, 80 recommendations from BCTF executive and BCTF committees and task forces will be considered at the meeting.

Among the most important are recommendations from the Education Finance Committee that the provincial government progessively assume a greater share of the cost of elementary and secondard education, aiming at an 80 per cent provincial share by 1980.

The committee proposes that the government expand property taxes to cover currently exempt property such as church and government property, and that education taxes be removed from all residential property.

Tantrum Started Him Off

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

It all began on his fourth birthday.

He threw a tantrum, heaved the toys across the room and wasn't reconciled until his father bought him the real thing.

He's been carpentering ever since.

He and his wife Betty are visiting Victoria after watching Matthews' biggest project to date sail into San Francisco Bay.

She's the replica of Sir Francis Drake's Golden Hind which is destined to be a floating museum at Fisherman's Wharf.

Matthews made all her guns 14 sakers (six-pounders), four falcons (2½-pounders) and four esmerils (swivel guns) that are mounted on the ship's gunwale.

He's also made all the furniture in her, lanterns, leather buckets and "pretty well everything that went down below."

He was first lured into the historial field when he was asked to make a gun carriage for a gun at Canisbrooke Castle on the Isle of Wight.

"It's one of the oldest guns in existence," Matthews said, "It was cast in 1549 and was one of the parish guns issued to every parish before the invasion of the Spanish armada."

He also made the guns for the replica of the Hudson's Bay Company's Nonsuch, which called here and is now in a Winnipeg museum.

All the wood Matthews used for the Golen Hind came from a big elm tree and a large oak from Osbourne House on the Isle of Wight.

"That was Queen Victoria's home and people find it intriguing when they hear Queen Victoria used to walk around under them. The trees were cut a year before the Golden Hind project came up and were nicely aged."

Matthews said San Francisco went ship-crazy when the Golden Hind sailed into the bay.

"There was a solid mass of boats out to meet her, about 3,000 of them," he said, "And when we sailed under the Golden Gate Bridge we looked up and saw a solid line of heads. People just stopped their cars, blocking traffic for miles."

But Matthews' most striking memory of San Francisco was given him by a large power cruiser that came out to greet the Golden Hind.

"This huge gin palace came alongside and I had the biggest surprise of my life when I looked down on her from the poop deck," he chuckled, "There, prowling up and down on her foredeck was a tiger!"

55% SPCA Increase Approved

Esquimalt council's finance committee Monday recommended approval of a 55 per cent grant increase for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals after spokesmen said the service would fold without the full amount.

The expenditure was part of $132,800 approved by the committee Monday night for three organizations.

SPCA spokesman David Beeching requested $16,768 from Esquimalt, a 55 per cent increase over the 1974 grant of $10,800.

Grants being requested from Victoria nad Oak Bay include increases of 88 and 49 per cent respectively.

Aldermen recommended approval of the budget after agreeing enforcement of animal control bylaws couldn't be done as cheaply and efficiently by the municipality.

Delegations from the Greater Victoria Library Board and Esquimalt's Royal Canadian Legion branch also appeared before the committee asking for financing.

Committee members approved Esquimalt's $111,000 share of Greater Victoria library costs of $1,400,000 — an increase of 21.2 per cent.

Recommendation will also be made to council that the Legion be given $5,000 to offset tax costs in 1975.

Legion spokesmen Gill Laurenson and Ken Klee told council the Legion is eligible for grant money under the Municipal Act beause it works for the community's general interests and advantage.

He said organization's taxes had gone from about $6,000 to almost $10,000 over the past year, and none of the money raised by members could be used for such costs.

GARDENING

Mastering Celery Culture Critical

Most gardeners would like to grow a good crop of celery and can do so once the culture of these plants is mastered. This is when we recognize the value of a good seed catalogue that gives details of culture for the varieties listed, details not found on the seed packets nor in the average book on gardening.

Germination of celery seed is a problem with most gardeners. It is slow compared with other popular vegetables, and the germinating temperature has a direct bearing on the habit of the plants.

An average of 21 days (3 weeks) is needed for germination during which time the mixture in which the seed is sown must be constantly moist, but never wet. This is assisted by covering the seed container with a sheet of glass. Plastic is not suitable because it allows heat to escape. Any drying of the soil will delay germination.

Temperature must be maintained at 18 degs. C. (65 F.) throughout the germination period. A drop overnight to 13 C. (55 F.) will increase the number of plants that bolt to seed.

Seed should be sown indoors 10 to 12 weeks (70 to 85 days) before the estimated date for weather conditions to be suitable for transplanting to the open garden, which will be from June 1 to 15 locally.

Should cold nights continue after transplanting, a large percentage of seedlings will produce seed stems instead of the desired leaf stalks. Purchased plants that have been dried out in their flats will react the same way.

Celery plants are the gluttons of the vegetable garden, heavy feeders and heavy drinkers, therefore must be carefully placed in relation to adjacent crops.

Onions cannot be planted nearby because of soil water from the celery rows reaching the onion roots in July and delaying ripening; other vegetables to which fertilizer is detrimental also have to be kept at a safe distance.

To retain the required amount of soil moisture at the roots, large amounts of compost or old manure have to be even mixed to a depth of 25 to 30 cms. (10 to 12 ins.) in the bed or rows being prepared for the transplants.

Frequent watering is necessary throughout our normally rainless summers, not over the plants, but directly on the soil over the root area. During the first few weeks after transplanting in June it is important to keep the top 10 cms. (4 ins.) sufficiently damp.

As the roots penetrate more deeply, water must be applied for a longer period on watering day, which will probably be about once a week. Surface sprinkling every day is a useless waste of time and water.

The crop requires 98 to 105 days to maturity, according to variety, and light feeding is needed every two to three weeks.

Feeding may consist of a mild tonic such as liquid whale or alginure (seaweed alginates), both of which can be poured over the plants as well as onto the soil; or two measuring teaspoonsful of 6-8-6 dissolved in a gallon of water, poured on the soil but not on the plants. Stronger fertilizer mixes will need the quantity to the gallon reduced in proportion to the increase in strength.

On feeding day, half the normal amount of water is applied to the soil, then the fertilizer solution, followed by the rest of the water to wash the food down to the feeding roots.

Non-bolting strains of celery are likely to appeal to home gardeners, but these are for early commercial crops grown in cool spring weather, and lack the qualities of the later varieties.

Named selections of the Utah and Salt Lake strains are full flavored and fine textured, usually producing shorter, more compact plants for the home garden that need no blanching. All Golden Celery strains must be blanched.

The tendency to pithy stalks, called "Punking out", has been greatly lessened in the Improved Utah 52-70 selections, a tendency that is aggravated by improper feeding and watering.

FAISAL . . . slain by nephew

Faisal Assassination Spurs Fears of New Oil Crisis

Times News Services

King Faisal of Saudi Arabia, the most moderate of Arab leaders and one of the world's most powerful monarchs, was assassinated today by a demented nephew in the midst of a Moslem religious ceremony in Riyadh.

His death threatened the Middle East and the world with a new crisis that could have unforseen effects on future oil prices.

Faisal was succeeded to the throne by his younger brother, Crown Prince Khalid, 62, who had served as first deputy prime minister.

The slaying had instant world-wide repercussions. Oil prices on the London stock market plunged as much as 24 cents, representing fears that the delicate state of Arab relations with the west could be impaired.

In New York, the jittery stock market dropped sharply at today's opening but then began to recover.

Analysts on Wall Street said Faisal's death added to the anxiety of investors over the failure of U.S. Secretary-of-State Henry Kissinger's Middle East peace mission, a major factor in sending prices downward Monday.

Although instrumental in the 1973 Arab oil embargo, Faisal was considered by U.S. businessmen to be pro-American and an admirer of the free enterprise system.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries cancelled today's Vienna meeting of experts on oil prices because of the death.

Some oil sources said his assassination could plunge OPEC into a severe crisis.

The experts were to discuss how to sever the traditional oil-dollar link to preserve their oil revenues from the decline in the value of U.S. dollar.

France expressed concern that the murder may dangerously increase tensions in the Middle East. The over-riding fear in the West is that the staunchly anti-Russian Faisal could be succeeded by a left-leaning regime.

Israel, faced with a breakdown of the Kissinger negotiations with Egypt, also reacted swiftly. An official source called the murder a reminder of the instability of Arab regimes and warned that if a leftist regime took over in Saudi Arabia there could be dangerous shifts in the balance of power in the Middle East.

A radio announcement in Riyadh said the nephew, Faisal bin Musaed shot the 69-year-old king several times after approaching him to offer salutations on the occasion of the Prophet Mohammed's birthday, being celebrated today throughout the Moslem world.

There was no immediate word on the fate of the nephew.

"When he got near the king, he fired several shots at His Majesty," the announcement said. The radio called the assassination "an individual one." It said the prince was "mentally unsound, had acted on this own and was not driven by anyone."

Peace Force Pullout?

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Defence Minister James Richardson told the Commons Monday that Canada's peace keeping forces in the Middle East would have to evacuate and leave the area of hostilities if a shooting war breaks out there.

He explained that they have sidearms and are not equipped to defend themselves against an invading army.

The question was raised in the house because of the dangerous situation developing between Israeli and the Arab nations with the breakdown of U.S. Henry Kissinger's failure to secure an agreement for peace between Israel and Egypt.

Egypt has called on the Arab world to mobilize against Israel. Israel has vowed to stand alone against threats and pressures.

In Cairo, Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmi asked the 20-nation Arab League Monday night to strangle Israel economically and politically.

He blamed Israel for the collapse of Kissinger's recent peace mission and accused the Jewish state of "playing with words" instead of negotiating.

B.C. Professionals Hinting at Strike

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

The word "strike" is now being whispered in hushed tones among the professional employees in the provincial government.

It's an unusual word for professionals to use and most of the talk is still aimed at avoiding strike action or any other kind of on-the-job confrontation. Nevertheless the Times has learned that militant feelings have been aroused among the 1,100 engineers, dentists and other professionals who form the B.C. Government Professional Employees' Association. (BCGPEA)

And in meetings around the province last week, the professionals made it clear to the BCGPEA executive they are willing to adopt a much harder line — assume an adversary role — to fight the government.

Negotiations with the government for the BCGPEA's first master contract have bogged down after eight months of talks and the professional civil servants are frustrated, disillusioned and more than a little angry.

They charge the government has not bargained in good faith and is now attempting to destroy the union.

The situation is rife with ironies and contradictions.

The NDP, with an ideological commitment to collective bargaining for civil servants, imposed unionization on a hesitant group of professionals who had had little or no previous association with unions.

The professionals dutifully if reluctantly formed their association last year but stressed that their aim was to establish a harmonious, non-adversary relationship with the government. They decided they should forego the right to strike and pledge their first loyalty to their employer and their professional code rather than to their own association.

But now the BCGPEA leaders believe the tables have turned.

It's the government which no longer wants the professionals to exist as a union and the professionals who are anxious to retain their rights as an association.

There are many steps the association can take to exert pressure on the government, according to the BCGPEA executive, and full strike action is at the bottom of a list of some 20 options.

Many associations members are still firmly opposed to any strike action by professionals but executive spokesmen indicated a "surprising measure of militancy" was evident at the recent meetings.

Some members of the BCGPEA blame the failure of negotiations on the government's inability to conceive of harmonious, non-adversary labor relations. With deep roots in the trade union movement, they say, the NDP is not willing to accept the professional approach of the BCGPEA.

Other association members charge that certain deputy ministers have persuaded the government that unionization of professional-management people will threaten the established lines of authority

U.S. Planning Viet Airlift

Times News Services

The U.S., using contracted commercial airliners, Thursday will begin an airlift of 10,000 refugees a day from Da Nang, Western diplomats said today.

Da Nang, South Vietnam's second-largest city about 350 miles north of Saigon, has become vulnerable to attack since the North Vietnamese over-ran two provincial capitals to the south and the Saigon government abandoned Hue 50 miles to the north.

Western diplomats said the retreating troops boarded boats under fire at the nearby port of Tan My for the trip down the coast of the South China Sea to Da Nang.

The pullout from Hue, the third largest city and spiritual centre of South Vietnam, left the Communists in control of 11 of the country's 44 provinces, 50 per cent of its 66,000 square miles.

There was no indication how long it would take for the 20,000 retreating troops to leave Hue, a walled city of stately streets, Buddhist shrines and ancient artifacts.

More than 1,000 U.S. marines were killed or wounded during the 1968 Tet offensive in 26 days of fierce fighting for Hue, 400 miles north of Saigon.

In Saigon, unsubstantiated rumors of possible coup attempts by enraged generals and colonels were numerous, and President Nguyen Van Thieu officially replaced the military governor of the capital with a general thought to be more loyal to him.

"The mood is very ugly," said a highly-placed Vietnamese military source. "Colonels are saying that Thieu should be assassinated and the generals are furious. It's like playing with fire around spilled gasoline. One of the matches is going to ignite it."

Thieu's view of the Hue battle was said to be that if defence of the city proves too costly, it is expendable, sources say.

Police Seize Diamonds

REGINA (CP) — A large number of diamonds valued between $500,000 and $1 million were seized during a search of 24 city homes in part of a country-wide raid, police said Monday.

An RCMP spokesman said it was believed an international diamond smuggling ring based in Regina may have been uncovered in the raid which followed an investigation conducted during the last few months.

The spokesman said the exact value of the gems will not be known until they can be examined by a gemologist.

The incident began about 9 a.m. when RCMP approached a home in a Regina suburb to serve a warrant under the Customs Act. They were met with a shot fired from within the building.

City police were called to aid the RCMP and entry to the building was gained after Morris Schumiatcher, a city lawyer, talked a man, whose name was not released, into surrendering.

There were no injuries. The RCMP spokesman said similar searches were conducted in other Canadian and U.S. centres.

Charges are pending and until they are laid later this week in provincial court, the names of individuals involved will not be released, he added.

BEAVER SYMBOL OFFICIAL

The small, broad-tailed rodent was recognized in a private bill introduced in the Commons by Sean O'Sullivan (PC — Hamilton Wentworth).

The bill, which received support of all parties in the Commons and the Senate, was given royal assent in the Senate Monday night.

Court Grants Picketing Curb

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton today granted a wider injunction than the Greater Victoria School District sought to restrain picketing by local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

After a three-hour hearing in B.C. Supreme Court chambers this morning the judge granted an injunction that:

—There shall be no interference with delivery of fuel oil to any and all schools;

—A maximum of two pickets only at any site of operation — the school board office and the schools;

—No picketing at schools between 8 and 10 a.m.;

—No picketing at schools between 3 and 4 p.m.;

Wootten said the injunction will continue until trial.

He said matters of law of "grave importance" have been raised as to whether sections of the Public Schools Act should override sections of the Labor Code and it is "most desirable that a trial of this matter be heard."

The school board had sought an injunction limiting pickets to three at each school entrance.

Union lawyer Ian Stewart said an appeal will be launched in the B.C. Court of Appeal.

Stewart argued there was no evidence of immediate danger to life and health.

He said the school board has "already created a regime of disruption in the school system" by cutting classes to between one and three hours a day.

"I don't see how pickets could interfere with deliveries when the pickets are not there much of the day," he said.

To grant an injunction now, he said, would effectively remove the "bargaining weapon," the union has.

Wootton objected to the use of the word weapon saying "men should get on together. There are too many weapons in the world today."

Stewart said only seven schools were affected by picketing, that the students were affected equally by the school board and the union, and

READERS' BONUS IN FOOD SECTION

Food and nutrition loom large in the minds of all homemakers these days, so it's no wonder that the Food and Nutrition section in the Victoria Times every Wednesday has been so popular with readers.

Now Victoria Times readers are getting a bonus. The Food and Nutrition section has been expanded and will appear both Wednesdays and Thursdays.

And a new personality has been added to the list of top-notch writers who appear in the section regularly.

He is "Tiny" Bennett, well-known Canadian professional outdoors writer who has also been cooking for 40 years — and writing about cooking for 18 years.

"Tiny" — he's six-foot-six — believes firmly that the role of a writer on food and cooking is to bring to readers quality home cooking based upon reasonable costs, and he has created a new look in cooking columns where costs to the family are carefully presented for all the meals covered.

Tiny Bennett — and the Food and Nutrition Sections — more good reasons to read the Victoria Times.

12th Seiner Down

The 12th fish boat to be lost or capsized since the herring season started eight days ago was spotted overturned in Hecate Strait this morning.

The 56-foot aluminium seiner was spotted 20 miles northeast of Cumshewa Inlet, which is south of Sandspit on Moresby Island.

It cannot be confirmed but it is believed the seiner carried a five-man crew.

Two Trans Pacific airline planes were despatched to the scene from Sandspit. Also searching the area were three aircraft from CFB Comox.

The boat was later identified as the Bravado, belonging to Nelson Bros. of Prince Rupert.

Two fisheries vessels are now combing the area as well as six vessels belonging to B.C. Packers. The coast guard cutter Rider was despatched to the scene from Bella Bella.

57% FOR PACT

OTTAWA (CP) — With about 50 per cent of the vote in, federal blue collar workers have been voting by a 57-per-cent margin in favor of a tentative contract settlement, a Public Service Alliance spokesman said today.

But the result so far on contract proposals that would provide pay raises of 29.25 per cent over 26 months is worrying alliance leaders who fear the agreement could be rejected by workers belonging to the 18,600-member group. Average hourly wage for the workers now is $4.42.

Early returns from some of the more vocal locals had indicated rejection of the settlement but as results from more moderate came in, the situation changed.

NEWS BRIEFS

Leftist Cabinet

LISBON (UPI) — Premier Vasco Goncalves today announced the creation of a new revolutionary cabinet packed with Communists and their allies in key ministerial posts. Socialist leader Mario Soares was ousted as foreign minister, despite his objections, but remained in the government without portfolio.

B.C. Oil Imports

OTTAWA (CP) — The B.C. Energy Commission estimates the province will have to import about 280,000 barrels of oil a day — about 90 per cent of its needs — by 1994.

The commission notes in a brief to the National Energy Board released Monday that B.C. oil fields currently meet only about 25 per cent of the province's demands. Five years ago they supplied 50 per cent.

U.S. Bank Fails

HOUSTON (AP) — The Franklin Bank was closed Monday because of "adverse economic conditions" and losses incurred by its loans. The failure was the fifth in the U.S. in the last two years. The bank, which opened in 1965, had deposits of slightly more than $18 million last Dec. 31, officials said.

Dockers Ordered Back to Work

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Parliament Monday night ordered B.C.'s 4,000 striking longshoremen to return to work today.

The Commons and Senate gave quick passage to legislation introduced Monday afternoon by Labor Minister John Munro, forcing the men to return to their jobs under the terms of their old contract which expired Dec. 31.

The West Coast Port Operations Act, 1975, as it is called, authorizes the binding arbitration of the dispute which has kept west coast docks idle since March 1.

Don Garcia, a spokesman for the International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union in Vancouver, said today he presumes the longshoremen will be back on the job later today.

Garcia said he presumes — and he emphasized presumes — the men will report for work on the docks at 5 p.m. today under the former collective agreement.

Meanwhile, members of the longshoremen's union are meeting to consider the back-to-work legislation.

Alex Cregan, president of the British Columbia Maritime Employers Association, said it will be Wednesday at the earliest before operations can resume.

Even if the longshoremen return it will take 24 hours to gear up for a resumption of operations on the waterfront.

He also said the employers have not yet received official notice from Ottawa that the legislation has been passed.

Under the terms of the legislation, the old contract between the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union and the B.C. Maritime Employers' Association is extended to Dec. 31, 1976, or until a new contract is worked out by arbitration, whichever is earlier.

The legislation also orders ship and dock foremen who walked off the job Sunday, to return to work while their first contract is being settled the same way.

The Commons rejected an attempt by New Democratic Party MPs to give the longshoremen the first half of the wage settlement agreed to by negotiators but rejected by the union membership Saturday.

That settlement, worked out by the two parties with the help of Assistant Deputy Labor Minister William Kelly, would have given the men a raise of $1.95 an hour — $1.15 in 1976 and 80 cents in 1976.
